I shall insist on a trial, and that very soon. I demand that I be forever cleared of all suspicion, and that can only be done through my absolute acquittal, which I am certain a second trial will effect.—Mrs. Florence Carman.

MAYOR SCORES SHOW GOWNS

SEEK NEW COSTUMES CARMAN SCANTY, TRIAL HE SAYS

FREEPORT, L. I., Oct. 27.—While Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman today prepared to go to New Jersey for a rest, and while her attorneys prepared to move for a swift retrial, rumors began to spread of a separation between Dr. and Mrs. Carman.

Freeport gossip first made itself heard, and then circumstances were brought forward as bearing out the truth of the rumors.

Mrs. Carman plans to go tomorrow to Raven, N. J., to a farm owned by Dr. Carman and Attorney Levy. It was here that she retired after her indictment for manslaughter in connection with Mrs. Bailey's death and before her indictment for first degree murder. She plans to remain there about a week.

DOCTOR WAS MISSING.

When Attorney Levy told the reporters of this plan, he said Dr. Carman would be in the party. But Dr. Carman himself later said he would not go with his wife.

It was pointed out that he did not go with her to Brooklyn for the bail hearing, and these two instances of seeming neglect were the more remarkable in view of the doctor's devotion to his wife up to the time of the jury's disagreement.

Attorney Levy was asked if there were any truth in the reports of a separation. He said there was no truth in them. Dr. Carman was asked the same question and replied:

"No! Indeed, I'm not going to New Jersey, it is true. I have to get to work for my living again, and to get back the practice I had before this unfortunate affair. I expect to be very busy from now on, and I hope that the public will forget us."

NONE TO WELCOME HER.

Those who saw Mrs. Carman return to her home after securing her release on bail, remarked that there was no one waiting outside to welcome her. Dr. Carman had not accompanied her to Brooklyn, and he did not even come to the door to meet her when she entered the house. Neither did Mr. and Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Carman's parents. Mr. Conklin opened the door from within for her to enter, and that was all.

Mrs. Carman, through Attorney Levy, issued a statement discussing the possibility of a new trial. She said:

I shall insist on a new trial, and that very soon. I demand

Mayor Curley today issued a sweeping edict against scanty theatrical costumes in Boston theatres, following a conference with Police Commissioner O'Meara and agents of the Watch and Ward Society, who protested about a certain show that has just arrived.

"Every man and woman performer who appears in Boston must wear sufficient clothing," said Mayor Curley, and his tone was emphatic.

"An undraped Grecian figure at the Old Howard is no worse than an undraped Grecian figure at the Boston Opera House. I shall permit no discrimination. The same rule must apply to all.

MUST OBEY RULE.

"I have sent out such a notice to every theatre manager in Boston. The rule must be obeyed by all. There are no exceptions.

"I have just had a conference with the Watch and Ward Society representatives and Police Commissioner O'Meara. I am informed that in at least one show now appearing in this city actresses in semi-draped attire come among the audience.

"This is not proper. It shall insist that performers remain on the stage. That is the place for them. This rule shall apply to women and men. They should not mingle with the audience. Our theatres must be conducted in a manner that will not be offensive to decent people.

"I have been informed that the raiment, or lack of raiment, on the young women who appear at one show is abbreviated to a shocking degree. But I do not propose to single out a single show or theatre. There must be a standard in Boston. From what I have been told some of the young women performers might as well be nude."

KILTS, TOO.

"How about Harry Lauder, or performers wearing Scotch kilts?" the Mayor was asked.

"I hadn't thought of this costume in particular, but it seems to me that even in the case of kilts care should be exercised and tights used to cover the bare leg. If these rules are not followed to the letter I shall shut up the theatres violating them."

Mayor Curley refrained from mentioning any particular show which caused lively speculation. It was known that the Watch and Ward censors and the police were well represented at a first performance last evening and it was rumored at City Hall that this show may have caused the conference today.

Severe Earthquake Shock Reported at Florence, Italy

FLORENCE, Italy, Oct. 27.—A severe earthquake shock was felt here today. The inhabitants were panic-stricken, but little damage was done.

Posse Hunting for Girl's Assailant

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Oct. 27.—A posse headed by Deputy Sheriff Reed are searching the woods for the assailant of Regina, fifteen-year-old daughter of Hector Precourt. The girl was clubbed on the wrist by an unknown man, who attacked her while she was walking on Metcalf street yesterday afternoon.

The family has recently been receiving letters saying that their home would be burned. Last night they vacated it and went to the home of neighbors.

Cochrane Must Settle Bill from Modiste

J. Eugene Cochrane of Dedham, clubman, polo player and carpet manufacturer, was ordered in Dedham Court today to settle a bill of $189.95 for gowns made by Helena C. Wilhelmy (Mlle. La Petite) of the Copley Plaza Hotel for Miss Eugenie Cochrane, the defendant's society daughter.

The bill itself was an exhibit. It read as follows:

White chiffon gown	$75.00
White beaded cap (see note)	15.00
Flowered velvet belt	15.00
Alterations in blue gown	7.95
White crepe gown	35.00
Alterations in white crepe gown	10.00
Pink chiffon petticoat	10.00
White linen gown	25.00
Alterations in white linen gown	5.00
Total	$189.95

Miss Eugenie Cochrane, an engaging maid of twenty years, was in court with her father and mother. The mother and daughter had been summoned as witnesses for the modiste. Mr. Cochrane was represented by Arnold Scott of Dedham, the modiste by George U. Morrie of Boston.

Miss Cochrane said on the stand that she ordered the goods described in the bill. Mrs. Cochrane corroborated her daughter's story.

Mrs. Cochrane added that "Mr. Cochrane always paid for his daughter's clothes until recently he protested against it."

"Mlle. La Petite" testified that she looked up Mr. Cochrane, thought him responsible for the goods, sent him a bill July 1, but received it back with a note that he refused to pay any bills contracted by his daughter.

Mr. Cochrane did not testify in his own defence, but his counsel argued that the bill was an overcharge in the first place and that Mr. Cochrane was not responsible for his daughter's bills in the next.

Judge Emery Grover ruled that the bill be paid in full.

On Friday Judge Hammond of the Supreme Court will determine the course to be taken on the motion of Sherman L. Whipple, asking that a time be fixed for a hearing in the suit Mr. Whipple has brought for certain New Haven stockholders to force William G. Rockefeller and other New Haven directors and former directors to refund something over a hundred million dollars lost through misconduct of the road's affairs.

GIRL TELLS HOW NECK CHAIN SAVED HER LIFE FROM FLYING BULLET

Marion Russell, Cambridge High School girl, who barely escaped death from bullet exploded on street car track. Broken neck chain shows where course of bullet was diverted.

Fourteen-year old Marion E. Russell of Cambridge told today how her neck-chain saved her from death or serious injury. She was struck by a bullet while on her way to Sunday school. The bullet hit her neck chain, cutting it in two, but being deflected so that she escaped with only an abrasion of the skin.

Marion, who lives at No. 1 Gardner street, resumed attendance at Cambridge Latin School today. She received a great welcome at school as a girl who was lucky to be living. Meanwhile the Cambridge police are searching for two young men who are thought to have put a cartridge on the trolley track and indirectly caused the danger to Miss Russell.

The girl's own story of how she was struck is as follows:

"I was walking along Prospect street, near Central square, on my way to Sunday school, when I heard a loud report in the street and immediately felt a stinging sensation in my neck. My neck seemed paralyzed for the moment and I remember moving my head around in a circle just to see if my neck was really all right.

"I wasn't hurt much that I could remember, so I kept on my way. When I came ahead of a show window I stopped and looked in, like I would in a mirror. I was surprised to see blood on my neck and my locket and chain were gone.

"Just then two young men—they were light-complexioned—came along the street and when they saw me looking in the window said: 'Well, it didn't hurt you very much, anyway, did it?'

"They appeared to me to have been watching me when I was hit, and seemed excited, as if they might have put the cartridge on the car track and then waited to see what would happen. They appeared relieved to see that I was not badly injured.

ALLIES PUSHING INTO ALSACE; AIR RAID ON WARSAW

Hard fighting is going on all along the great battle line of France and Belgium, it was officially announced at the Paris War Office this afternoon. There is particularly violent fighting in the northern sphere of hostilities, especially in the region of Lens and between Ypres and Rouers in Belgium, where the allies have made progress. In the region of Nancy the allies have taken the offensive and have driven the enemy beyond the frontier. On the centre an artillery duel has resulted in a success for the allies, several German batteries being smashed.

Warsaw, the capital of Russian Poland, is seriously menaced by the Germans, according to official advices from Berlin today.

Fighting is reported about the walls of the city, and Zeppelin airships are said to be dropping bombs and inflicting great damage. The Town Council has left the city, and the inhabitants are reported in flight.

Other important claims made by the Berlin official statement are the assertion that the great French stronghold of Verdun has been isolated, and that counter attacks of the allies in Belgium have been repulsed and some further progress has been made by the Kaiser's forces. A Berlin dispatch received from Copenhagen says that the Kaiser has commanded that Calais be taken, irrespective of the expenditure of life and material.

French artillery is bombarding the German positions in Southern Alsace all the way from Belfort to Muelhausen, according to a Berlin dispatch via Copenhagen.

"The French are trying to storm the German positions," it says. "They have been energetically building fortifications in all villages and placing heavy artillery in position.

"The Cologne Zeitung reports that the Germans in Northern

Humor and Pathos of Theatrical Life

Among the younger short story writers of today none has a rarer gift of humor than Compton MacKenzie, whose stories of life on the stage in London have won for him an enviable reputation both in England and America. Filene's

"The impossible is impossible only until someone accomplishes it"

Filene's

TRUTHFULLY the above has been written on the margin of the pages of man's achievement through the centuries. It was written there yesterday, is being written today and will be written tomorrow.

Turning over the leaves of Filene store history we are glad to see how frequently it occurs, recording triumphs over obstacles that seemed insurmountable, betterment of things that seemed perfect.

Tomorrow again it will be jotted down indelibly, this time on the records of our women's and misses' suit shops and our millinery salons.

These departments, like all others in the Filene store, are in charge of enthusiastic and highly-trained men and women who know thoroughly the inside and the outside of their work.

This work each has done so well that we venture to say had experts yesterday analyzed it carefully the verdict would have been: "It is impossible for you to crowd another thread or fibre of value into these stocks."

And yet tomorrow, the occasion of the annual sale in the three departments named, the impossible will no longer be impossible because it will have been accomplished.

WITHOUT hurrying into untried markets, without going beyond our proved sources of supply, we shall feature this annual occasion by rendering values distinctly greater than usual, and therefore greater than had been deemed possible.

This results from weeks of planning and from cordial co-operation of producers who are as eager as we to see value-records broken here.

Every offering in this annual sale of women's and misses' suits and millinery represents the latest style word. It marks a point emphatically approved by our purchasing public or a point distinctly in advance of that.

And it demonstrates anew what can be accomplished by the system of expert specialization round which this ever-growing business revolves.

Women and misses familiar with these annual events will require no urging. They will flock to Filene's, in most receptive mood, expecting pleasant surprises.

This, together with accompanying details, is written in expectation of making a large number of new friends.

$12 to $17.50 grades

B. Black velvet, monkey fur and goura, $7.50

Four hundred beautiful dress hats, and hardly two alike. Rich Lyons velvet shapes alone worth more than $7.50.

See the pictures—they give a good idea of the variety in these beautiful dress hats. The values we have been able to put into this annual event are actually surprising to ourselves. Conditions have lent themselves to extraordinary results.

Trimmings of fur, ostrich, paradise, goura, numidie, etc.

In preparing the hats for this sale, we have taken full advantage of the wide latitude in this season's fashions and have produced so many types that all may come confident of finding a becoming style.

For instance, sketch A shows a soft crush turban of rich black velvet with two delicate sprays of paradise tucked into a fold of light-colored fur. The paradise alone on this hat would cost at least $7 ordinarily.

Sketch J shows a hat of light brown felt faced with dark brown velvet with uncurled ostrich spreading broadly over the crown. This plumage alone would be regularly $10.

Every woman knows how expensive are the tiny goura sprays. There are four sprays (worth $6 regularly) arising from a bed of monkey fur on the large sailor shown in sketch B.

And so on through four hundred hats. These hats are conservatively valued at $12 to $17.50, as you will see when you come.

HARVARD'S 'CRIMSON' NOT HIT BY RULING AGAINST RED FLAGS

If the Socialist flag is illegal so is the Harvard flag—Socialist of Massachusetts.

The Harvard flag is crimson not red. We should worry—Harvard officials.

"Crimson—a deep red color tinged with blue; also red color in general. The Bible says, in Isaiah, "red as crimson." —Webster's Dictionary.

Harvard College interests united today in declaring that the decision of Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Supreme Judicial Court against all red flags in parades, Socialist and otherwise, does not hit the Harvard banner for various reasons.

Several Harvard "grads" are lawyers of note. They say that, to the first place, the "red-flag" statute will never be construed against "dear old Harvard."

It is argued, in the next place, that the Harvard flag is crimson, not red. This recalls the official statement from Harvard a year or two ago that the real Harvard shade is "material crimson."

The Harvard Club flies the college flag from its new clubhouse on Commonwealth avenue. But Odin H. Roberts, president of the club, who was graduated from Harvard College in '88 and law school in '91, remarks that a clubhouse is not a parade. "That lets us out," declares Mr. Roberts.

WHAT PARKER SAYS.

Former Attorney-General Herbert Parker is a Harvard man. He entered with the class of '78, although he was forced to leave on account of ill-health before he completed the course. Later he was awarded the honorary degree of Ph. D. by the university. Mr. Parker said this:

"I am confident that should Harvard University come under this statute the court would not sustain any case against it in this matter. It is the object of this statute to cover organizations with which Harvard as an organic body is never connected. Every one knows or ought to know the history of this flag, which Harvard University is carrying in its parades or upon any public occasions. I am confident, I say, that the court would not render a decision against Harvard and would not instruct the police to prevent the carrying of that flag in processions.

"Upon which we come to the letter of the law that is another question. It might easily give rise to a difference of opinion. It certainly has this present moment, since this decision has been rendered, that the Socialists have caused serious reflection upon what that statute really means."

CURIOUS COMPLICATION.

Former Lieutenant-Governor Louis A. Frothingham (Harvard, '95, Harvard Law School, '98), said:

"It is a curious complication, think, with others, that the court would not consider the decision against Harvard University."

Vice-President Roberts of the Harvard Club said:

"According to the wording of the statute relative to the display of the red flag, the law applies only to flags carried in parades. This letter is free from under the operation of the statute when we fly the Harvard banner from the Harvard Club on Commonwealth avenue.

"But, to be real serious, I think that this piece of legislation is ill-advised and foolish. It is a boomerang for the Socialists, when you come right down to the feeling behind it, and ought to have no place on the statute books of a free country.

"When too strictly interpreted, the man with the red flag who preceded steam-roller on the high-way, the highway, the crossing-tender flagging the train, the auctioneer, and anyone using the red flag in its limited sense would come near to being violators of this silly statute."

Chief Justice Rugg is not a graduate of Harvard. He is an Amherst man (class also Boston University Law School, '68). But he was awarded an honorary degree of LL.D. by Harvard in 1907.

The statute upon which the Chief Justice based his decision reads:

"No red or black flag, or no banner, ensign or sign having upon it no inscription supposed to embalm government, or which is sacrilegious, or which may be derogatory to public morals, shall be carried in parade within this Commonwealth."

RULING HITS SOCIALISTS.

The Socialists, who are hit by the "red flag" decision, have raised the point that this includes Harvard's banner as well as the Socialist one.

If the Socialists carry out their threats policemen may descend upon the undergraduate parade next week and put it out of business, as the students always carry crimson banners in their parades.

Fred W. Moore, graduate manager of Harvard athletics, said today:

"We shall pay no attention to the Supreme Court decision, for you see the Harvard flag is not a red flag—it's crimson."

Harvard has some rather good linkers among her alumni, and if the Socialists make trouble a hot legal fight is expected. The Supreme Court may be forced to decide if crimson is red in the eyes of the law.

RULING SWEEPING.

The sweeping ruling of the Supreme Court came in the appealed case of John Karvonis of Worcester, charged with carrying a red flag in a Socialist parade in Fitchburg. Karvonis refused to obey Chief Justice Rugg and consented to by the full bench. It reads in part:

"If the flag is of the recognized color (red) in its essential and dominating characteristics, then the mere circumstance that it bears also an inscription or device of another color is not enough to prevent its being a red flag. . . . The words of the statute are sweeping and make no exception in favor of political parties, social organizations, secret societies or beneficiary or other associations.

"Many believe the Harvard flag is sinply barred by the text of the decision. Many labor organizations, which have red in their emblems are also apparently affected by the decision.

ROMOLA JOHNSTON,

Wellesley sophomore who works for Fire Fund.

With more than half a million dollars to be raised for the Fire Fund before January 1, Wellesley girls and Wellesley alumnae throughout the country plunged today into their stupendous task.

There is grave concern that the amount may not be completed, in which case the college would lose hundreds of thousands of dollars that have been pledged.

Every Wellesley girl is collecting her details for methods of raising money. Miss Romola Johnston, of Evanston, Ill., who was a member of the sophomore promenade committee, is one of the most active sophomores.

A band concert in Symphony Hall, November 17, is one of the money-raising plans.

Two Boys Arrested for Check Fraud

Albert T. Mayer, eighteen, and Clifford Larsen, eighteen, both of East Boston, are under arrest, the former charged with forging and passing a check for $35, the latter with the larceny of $25. The police say that Mayer has confessed that he forged the name of George L. Young of No. 263 Webster street, East Boston, to the check. He bought a coat for $9.75, giving the check in payment and receiving a cash balance of $25.25. The police claim Larsen was with Mayer when the check was passed. Both were booked to sail for Europe on the Devonian as cattle tenders.

CITIZENS OF DORCHESTER TO 'GET TOGETHER'

Dorchester "get together" night to further friendly and figuratively harmonize business men, property owners and workers will meet to discuss plans for improvements for the district.

The meeting will be held in Bloomfield Hall, Lower Mills avenue. It has been called by the Dorchester Board of Trade, a newly organization of Dorchester business men.

There will be present Mayor Curley, Congressman Gallivan, Street Commissioner Rourke and the candidates for all political parties for public office from Wards 20 and 24. They will be present to be double role of speakers and listeners.

They will speak on various phases of Dorchester development. And they will listen to Dorchester's needs, as developed by discussion of the evening.

Aims to secure the following improvements will be taken:

A subway passing through the heart of Dorchester.

Construction of the Old Colony avenue boulevard.

Improvement of Tenean Beach.

Grandstand sidewalks.

Development of the waterfront along Dorchester Bay and Neponset River.

The subject of a subway for Dorchester will receive particular attention. Citizens of Dorchester have been working for a subway for years, finally the turned to Andrews square under constructionwas authorized. Dorchester folk claim this was simply a sop thrown out to them by the Legislature to quiet them.

They think that the defeat of the tunnel proposition has been distasteful among the factions in Dorchester as to what route the tunnel should take.

Solidly through the instrumentality of the Board of Trade, questions of route have been waived, and residents of every section of Dorchester will work together to get a tunnel through the district which will be the greatest good for the greatest number. The question of route will be left to the Transit Commission and the Elevated. Candidates will be instructed to work together for subway abortion from the Legislature for a tunnel.

Why Cadum Is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the inflamed parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This, according to a well-distinguished New York physician, seems to kill the germ and set up the healing process quickly. Cadum, the well-known skin remedy, supplies that kind of a covering and keeps out the air. The covering consists of petrolatum and white wax, which Cadum contains. The other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the water that comes from the sores, and oil of cade, which is one of the oldest and best known remedies for Eczema. Physicians everywhere employ oil of cade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating Eczema. Cadum costs 10c for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

VERDUN FORTRESS ISOLATED, GERMAN WAR OFFICE SAYS

Furious night attacks mark the battle between Dixmude and Nieuport in Belgium, where the Germans, who crossed the Yser, are trying to break through the wall of steel presented by the allies. According to Paris reports the German guns near Lille and on the Yser are out of proportion to the losses sustained there in killed, wounded and prisoners.

At least three ships of the British squadron off Nieuport have been damaged by the German artillery on shore, says a wireless dispatch from the Berlin Foreign Office to the German embassy at Washington.

The port city of Nieuport has been nearly wiped out by shells and flames. The famous old lighthouse built in 1284 was struck by shells thrown from the German guns against the British warships and was badly damaged. The fifteenth century gothic church has been shattered. The massive baroque tower, which was restored in 1903, was struck by shells and ruined.

FIERCE FIGHTING IN STORM.

The Russian official statement of today controverts the German claim of successes in the Eastern war theatre.

Defeat of the Germans in their flanking movement north of Warsaw is announced in a report from the general staff. It states that the Germans have retreated toward Thorn, their base in East Prussia.

A heavy snowstorm is raging along the battle front in East Prussia and Russian Poland. It is almost a blizzard, but fighting continues between the opposing forces. The fiercest conflict along the front is now going on in the forest of Nenagliowsky, southeast of Rawa, where the Siberian troops are attacking the intrenched Germans with their bayonets. The battle in the forest has been raging for four days and the losses on both sides have been enormous, but it is reported that three lines of the German trenches have been captured.

Austrian troops are being sent West to aid the Germans in Belgium, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam. It says that 10,000 Austrians arrived at Ghent on Sunday.

The heavy guns of the Japanese that are bombarding the forts of Tsing Tao, the port of the German leasehold of Kio Chau, China, are continuing the ranmonade night and day, Tokio reports. One of the German forts has been completely silenced by the Japanese howitzers. A Japanese aeroplane dropped bombs upon the power station, damaging it.

EYE WITNESS TELLS OF NIGHT ATTACK ON GERMANS BY BRITISH

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A graphic description of a night attack made by British infantry in the trenches in the Belgian zone of operations on October 16, is given in an official report written by one of the officers and made public by the government press bureau today. After giving a detailed account of the operations up to October 16, the writer continues:

"That night the important crossing of the river at Bridge 16 was attacked by the Germans who at the entrance of the town erected a barricade, the bottom of which was protected by the British cavalry, obtained the help of artillery, which threw the bombs over to pierce and destroy the defenders.

"The cavalry advanced to the centre of the town, which they reached the farther end while one building appeared to be on fire, in a short time a pioneer in that shelter illuminated the scene with a lighted match.

"The enemy's fire surrounding houses posted in this to allow our machine gunners and the rest of the cavalry retired with a loss of one officer wounded and nine men killed and wounded.

RESCUE WOUNDED.

"A party of volunteers returning and in accordance had recently secured the Infernet and rescued the wounded.

"On the 15th there was fighting in and along the line of the river. The enemy's attack was made against practically our whole of our line. At one point the enemy succeeded in making a successful counter attack in the German rear were found in one of the trenches which the British were taken. A letter was found upon one of the German prisoners saying that his regiment had received orders to fight up to the British. The task, the writer says, would be no light one. He spoke of the ignorance of the Germans as to the strength of the English forces.

"The advance through the north has hindered both by the weather, and the nature of the country. It is impossible to forecast the period when the troops would meet.

"The struggle on the Aisne continues without any marked change in the general situation. It can be told from the nature of the attacks which the Germans are now making and from the appearance of prisoners that the reinforcements are rather inferior to the best troops which have been engaged in the earlier fighting. Their moral is not high, and they are not of the physique of the men who were engaged in the battles of the Marne and Aisne.

1,500 DEAD IN TRENCHES.

"On the 24th a determined but unsuccessful attack was made against our line. At one point the enemy succeeded in making a successful counter attack in the German rear were found in one of the trenches which the British were taken. A letter was found upon one of the German prisoners saying that his regiment had received orders to fight up to the British. The task, the writer says, would be no light one. COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair, was grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible as gray hair is not in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Get to Go Deep to Cure Rheumatism

Liniments Help Locally, But the Disease is Way Down Inside

To get at the source of rheumatic pains it requires the deep, searching influence of S. S. S., the famous blood cure. Rheumatism is primarily a blood disease that, when it is in this vital fluid that rheumatic tendencies are carried, lodges in the joints and muscles, there to irritate the nerves and cause pain. And in order to drive out these pain inducing poisons it requires a blood that will sink deep into the tiny glands imbedded in the innermost tissues. S. S. S. reaches wherever the blood goes and carries into its medicinal influence. This explains why it overcomes the most chronic forms of rheumatism, why it dislodges those deep-seated troubles that the joints for it acts as a solvent and assists the blood to provide in the tissues those natural elements to cover it that the body building process continually craves and must have. If you have never tried S. S. S. for rheumatism, get a bottle today of any druggist. Use it as directed and with some simple home help you will soon dethrone the worst and most painful forms of rheumatism. Write the medical department, The Swift Specific Co., 54 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for additional advice. Those may be cases where a slight help from a specialist alone strike is free, will solve the mystery that has been making life miserable for you. When you ask for S. S. S. be sure you and refuse all substitutes.

Official War Reports.

GERMAN.

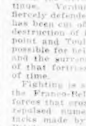
BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The operations against Warsaw are developing and the situation is favorable. A battle is raging at the walls of the fortress. Heavy losses have been inflicted on the troops from Siberia and the Caucasus who were put in the first lines to stop the Russian army.

The commander of one regiment had to be replaced three times as a result of the effective work of our sharpshooters.

Zeppelins and aeroplanes are bombarding the Warsaw fortifications with bombs and are causing great damage. The council of Warsaw has left the city and the inhabitants are leaving as rapidly as possible. In the western area the German counter attacks made by the allies. The Belgian army has suffered so severely that it will be of no further help to the allies. Across the Yser and along the coast troops have advanced slightly, but progress will be made more rapidly now that heavy artillery has been brought up.

The British warships have been compelled to withdraw from the Belgian coast because of the effective fire of our heavy guns.

AUSTRIAN.



VIENNA, Oct. 27.—(via Berlin and Amsterdam, Oct. 27.—Complete Austro-German forces operating in Galicia are now massing positions in a long, almost continuous line from Sandomir to Cracow.

Austro-German forces operating in Galicia are massing positions in a long, almost continuous line from Sandomir to Cracow.

Another battle is developing between the Vistula and the Pilica rivers, in which the Austro-German forces are attempting to outflank the Russian army. Violent counter attacks by the Austro-Hungarian forces have compelled the Russians to reinforce their lines in many places. The battle is still raging.

Austrian troops have been successful on the lower San south-east of Przemysl. Vigorous encounters are proceeding between Ivangorod and Warsaw.

In the fighting before Ivangorod we have up to the present time captured sixty Russians and nineteen machine guns. Near Jarowitz a Russian colonel and 700 soldiers were forced to surrender. Near Zalasze and in the vicinity of Nasierzma the enemy has been driven back. The situation generally is unchanged.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The battle goes on continuously and is raging with particular vigor between the lower reaches of the Aisne river and the region of Lens. On this part of the front the allies have not yielded an inch, while they have continued to make progress in the region between Ypres and Roulers.

In the region of Soissons and in that of Berry-Au-Bac, an artillery battle has turned to our advantage and has resulted in the destruction of the enemy's batteries.

In the region east of Nancy, between the forest of Beauge and the forest of Parroy, we have taken the offensive and have driven the enemy from the first line trenches.

Russia—On the river San and the south of Przemysl, the Russian offensive has become accentuated.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 27.—While the Germans were making frontal attacks on our positions along the Vistula, other forces operating from Thorn attempted a flanking movement, apparently with the purpose of striking the railroad from Mlawa to the fortresses of Novo, Georgievsk and Warsaw. This attempt was repulsed by the Russians.

As a result of their losses the Germans were compelled to withdraw toward Thorn, their base in East Prussia. The forces of the enemy that reached the Mlawa district and those further east were forced to withdraw to Prussia because their supports failed to come up from Thorn, in anticipation of an invasion by our forces, the people of East Prussia along the eastern border have been ordered to withdraw into the interior.

Sidelight and Personalities of the Great War

MAJOR-GENERAL ERICH VON FALKENHAYN, German minister of war, has been appointed chief of the general staff, succeeding General Helmuth von Moltke, who is ill, Rome reports say.

DEPUTY PAUL PROUST, a reserve sergeant of infantry, was killed at St. Nicholas.

LIEUTENANT SIR PHILIP LEE BROCKLEHURST, who accompanied the British Antarctic expedition in 1907, has been wounded.

MAJOR-GENERAL HUGHES, Canadian minister for defence, says 400,000 Canadians have gone to Canada in the hope of joining the Canadian forces.

JOSEPH GRAHAM of No. 104 East Brookline street, Boston, left Halifax today to enlist in the Canadian contingent. He has three brothers at the front.

ASK FOR PETTICOATS.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Le Temps appeals to Parisiennes to send their woolen petticoats for use by the wounded.

"When the soldiers are suffering from leg wounds it is impossible for them to wear trousers, and they suffer extremely from the cold before being transferred to the hospital," says the paper. "Petticoats with safety pins attached to them would be a boon."

SENDS KAISER PHOTOS.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Jefferson Davis Cotton's Chateau de Chaumont is said to have been occupied by General von Kluck's staff during the battle of the Marne. Mr. Cotton secured permission to visit the chateau, where he once entertained the Kaiser's sister, Princess Charlotte of Saxe Meiningen.

As a result of his trip to the chateau, he has sent to the Kaiser a bundle of photographs of the place as it is today. He says: "I have drunk beer with him. I have been host to his brother and sister. Perhaps he will try not to deny that the pictures I send him are true."

The most damning photograph is that of the wall of the salon, from which priceless tapestries were torn down and the names of a dozen Prussian officers written there in chalk. All the tapestries were stolen.

FIXES PLANE UNDER FIRE.

BERLIN, via The Hague, Oct. 27.—Aviator Leichkardt of a Zeppelin airship crew has been decorated with the Iron Cross, first class, for the Zeppelin was dropping bombs on Antwerp was detected in a searchlight in the town and a battery shot a speed shells around it. One of the shells shattered the framework of a propeller.

Leichkardt volunteered to saw off the propeller, which task he accomplished in half an hour, while clinging to the shattered framework 6,000 feet above the guns of the fortress.

BRITISH ENTRENCH.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Farmers in the vicinity of Harlem, Eng., are preparing for possible German invasion by digging trenches presumably under direction of the British officers, according to James S. Colwell of Newark, who arrived today.

MRS. CARMAN WILL INSIST ON NEW TRIAL

that I be forever cleared of all suspicion, and that no one be done through my associations with me, which I am very sorry for, and trial will effect.

Even though ten of the jurors have decided I was falsely accused, I shall not feel until I am acquitted by all that I am entirely free from suspicion.

I shall not be satisfied by a disagreement to try me again for the indictment will stand.

HEALTH HAS SUFFERED.

The terrible disappointment caused by the jurors' failure to agree has hurt my health immeasurably, and I am now going to try to forget the horrible ordeal that unfortunate, innocent women occasionally are picked out to undergo.

For the benefit of those interested I want to say that the trial itself was reported very fairly.

Attorney Smith, and Mr. Smith said at Mineola he would not move for another trial unless the defence did so, and that he is unable to determine positively there was an agreement made before the case closed among certain of the jurors to acquit Mrs. Carman. His investigation of this report is being continued today.

MOTHER BLAMES ASHTON.

Attorney Levy's impression, which coincides with the belief of District Attorney Smith, is that should a new trial be moved it will begin in December. The probability is that should the district attorney ask for a second trial, Justice Frederick E. Crane will preside. Justice Crane presided at the trial of Thornton Jenkins Hallnes, who was acquitted of complicity in the murder of William E. Annis.

Mrs. Platt Conklin, mother of Mrs. Carman, said she could not understand the verdict.

"Mr. Ashton was responsible for the disagreement," she said. "I told our lawyers not to accept him as a juror. Mr. Hovey would have voted for acquittal but for him. Mr. Mount, who is a Sunday school superintendent, a man of honor and integrity, got down on his knees trying to induce Mr. Ashton to acquit my daughter."

Mr. Ashton was the man whom, when being examined for the jury, replied to counsel's question as to whether the dictagraph feature would prejudice him:

"It wouldn't prejudice me to any degree, but I shouldn't like my wife to get a dictagraph in my house."

GRAHAM'S CHOICE.

Mr. Conklin, Mrs. Carman's father, likewise regretted that Mr. Ashton had been accepted as a juror. He said today:

"While we do not impeach the conscientiousness of Ashton or of Mr. Hovey, who stood for conviction, we do remember that Mrs. Carman did not want Ashton on the jury. When he was being examined, Mrs. Carman asked Mr. Graham to challenge him, but he believed then that Mr. Ashton would not be friendly. But Graham declared that Ashton was the very man he wanted, and accepted him."

William B. Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, and Mrs. Jennie Dwyer, mother, would not discuss the case today beyond saying that they were satisfied and would make no fight for a new trial.

Mrs. Carman remained indoors during the early hours today, recovering from the effects of the excitement of her trip to Brooklyn to secure bail.

She was very much agitated during that trip, but the effects of the nervous strain showed today.

Ernest Ramsdill and Smith Cox are Mrs. Carman's bondsmen. They furnished her $25,000 bond after her first indictment, and they likewise furnished the $25,000 bond on which she is now free.

They, with Attorney Levy, District Attorney Smith and Clerk Hansom of the Supreme Court, made the trip to Brooklyn from Mineola in one automobile, while Mrs. Carman, in blue motor coat and veil, rode with Sheriff Pettit in another car.

STOPS FOR LUNCHEON.

After bail had been arranged, and on the way back to Freeport, Mrs. Carman insisted on stopping at the Bedford fleet, Bedford Avenue and Flatbush Railway, for luncheon, and Ramsdill, Mrs. Carman and Attorney Levy made up the luncheon party. Sheriff Pettit, the District Attorney and Clerk Hansom hurrying on to Mineola.

3 HOUSES GONE, MANY COTTAGES IN FIRE PATH

Three houses near the Squantum Inn in Squantum were destroyed by fire today. A northwesterly gale prevailed and for a time it looked as if a dozen homes in the path of the flames would be destroyed. The loss is about $15,000.

The fire started in the two-and-a-half story house of Paul Hersey on Standish road. The house was a mass of flames when neighbors first discovered the blaze. There was no one in the house when the fire broke out. The fire burned a small Summer cottage adjoining and then burned the home of William Hoag.

News spread through Quincy that a big fire was in progress and fully one hundred automobile parties hurried to the scene of the fire. The motor apparatus from Atlantic was the first to reach the scene. This apparatus made a run of two miles.

NEWS NOTES OF POLITICIANS AND POLITICS

The worst and the shouting die,
The candidate all cease to speak,
And we, with sons school-ward bound,
Will rest again—some time that day next.

Secretary of State Donahue and Senator Mack, with the other men injured in that auto accident on the Pittsfield-Lenox road, have the sympathy of every man in the State today. It was the toughest sort of luck.

What with Governor Walsh, Secretary Donahue and Senator Mack in bed, it begins to look as though there were a fatality about Democratic official arms.

Colonel Roosevelt, in spite of that sore throat of his, managed to talk forty speeches in four days for Gifford Pinchot.

Mrs. Claiborne Catlin can sympathize with Governor Walsh. She was making a horseback tour of the State for suffrage—but her horse bucked, threw her and broke his own leg. He was shot and she returned to Boston.

There is only one Republican rally scheduled for Boston tonight. A squad of speakers headed by Frank Foster and Martin Hays will court the voters out in the Allston district.

Mr. McCall and Grafton Cushing will labor over Fitchburg tonight, and Senator Lodge will plead with Worcester.

A little bunch of Cambridge voters headed by Joseph Wall have read Russell A. Wood out of the Progressive party and claim to be "Progressives themselves" because they indorse Levi Gould for county commissioner, so there is evidently nothing in their Progressive claim.

Anyone that indorses Levi Gould out in Middlesex after the facts Senator McCarthy of Middlesex has brought forward against Mr. Gould, must be, as the saying goes, "deaf in one ear and can't hear out of the other."

Senator McCarthy's fight against Gould and the Middlesex ring has been one of the finest features of the campaign. Mr. McCarthy has a record of accomplishment, and it may be the fine fight he's ever made.

Joseph Walker told the ministers up at Pilgrim Hall yesterday that he may have been inconsistent in politics, but he has always been honest. In other words, Mr. Walker, once a Republican, was not afraid to admit he had been wrong.

It is a fair assertion that there are a lot of Republicans, who, like Mr. Walker, will abandon consistency and espouse their honest convictions at this election. That is why the Republican leaders complain of the "indifferent voter."

Mr. Walker and Mr. McCall appeared on the same platform yesterday, but it was before the ministers, so no fur flew.

Walter H. Page, American Ambassador to England, has furnished Mr. Gardner of Essex with a complimentary letter. Yes, this Mr. Page is the one who rejoiced that America is "slighted and English ruled, or something like that.

Governor Walsh rightly regards his work for the laboring men in amending and altering the compensation law as one of the best things he has done. He discussed the matter with audiences at New Bedford and Fall River yesterday, and his hearers evidently agreed that the Governor has played fair with them.

The Boston charter fight has been dragged into State politics. Mr. McCall opposes the new charter and says Governor Walsh should not have signed the bill. Mr. Walsh replies: "The bill provides only that the people of Boston may choose their own form of government. It was because I believed they had a right to self-government that I signed the bill."

Grafton Cushing is opposing the abolition of party enrollment. Party politics is one thing, but the use of party weapons in the hands of political manipulators of Mr. Cushing's sort, so perhaps his attitude is not surprising. Party enrollment has no place in real representative government. And as far as that goes, neither has Mr. Cushing.

James H. Vahey, Peter F. Tague and James H. Brennan spoke at Senator Horgan's Congressional rally last night in the eleventh district.

Mayor Hurley of Salem is facing a recall election, but he still keeps his hat on.

Mayor Good and former Mayor Barry of Cambridge today appear with Congressman Dettrick at noon-day rallies.

BERYL GROGAN DIED AFTER DOCTOR LEFT, HER MOTHER LEARNS

Beryl Grogan Krause, Cambridge "love nest" girl, to whose funeral in Texas mother plans to rush today.

That Beryl Grogan Krause, the pretty "love nest" girl of Cambridge, was slowly improving, the mother, Mrs. Moore, who attended her for arsenic poisoning on her mother's plantation at Buckeye, Texas, and died after the doctor left, was the latest news received today from Texas by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Grogan.

Mrs. Grogan got this telegram from Joseph C. Harrison of Buckeye, from whom she bought her cotton plantation:

Buckeye, Texas, Oct. 26.
Mrs. E. W. Grogan:

Tried to deliver to Beryl your letter sent to her in my care, and told her that I had such a letter and she said she would arrange to come to town and see it, but she never came. I still have the letter in my possession.

Beryl took two reasonsuit of ingle street about ten in the morning. The doctor was called and arrived at 2:30 and remained about two hours, saying that she was much better. She died at 5:30 a. m., Tuesday, no one being with her but her husband. She expressed a wish to be buried in Texas and told Krause to keep her dog and other property. There is no evidence that she died by any other means than poison, self-administered.

J. C. HARRISON.

MOTHER'S DOUBT PERSISTS.

Mrs. Grogan said in commenting on this telegram:

"If my daughter was not considered in critical condition by the attending physician and reported by him to be improving when in left, why did she die? Why should her husband get the one and only property when the dog which is worth $150 and the other property belongs to me. I expect him to explain in Buckeye are badly confused. I shall evidently have to go there full when I get there.

Before leaving for Texas today I shall enter a complaint, at the suggestion of my counsel, Attorney E. E. Clarke, to the Boston Postoffice authorities concerning the manner in which my mail and that of my dead daughter was tampered with for months.

"I want the authorities at Washington to take up the matter. Investigation of four telegrams and letters, some of the latter containing money from me and Beryl's grandfather, Richard H. Grogan of Brookline, will be one of my first duties down there.

"I still insist there is an element strongly suspective of foul play.

"An illustration of what my daughter experienced in her correspondence is given in the letter received by Walter Chandler:

Aug. 12, 1914.

Dear Friend:

Received your letter and hope to be excused for not having answered it until now, but now I am in their new apartment. That's good.

Say, have you seen mother lately? I have written to her several times and have had no word from her. Also about this telegram you sent a duplicate of. Would like it, please. How did she send it, collect or was it paid for? I never received any telegram whatever.

I have some news to tell you, I don't know whether mother told you or not. I am married now, by name being Mrs. Krause. (compressed) How is everything in Boston? Fine, I suppose, as usual. I must close. Let me hear from you soon. I would like to know about mother.

As ever, your friend
BERYL.

HAS FUNERAL DELAYED.

It will be observed that she mentions in this letter dated Oct. 10 "I'm married now." Mr Chandler and I both agree that my husband is watching her write this.

"I succeeded in delaying the funeral from Monday until Thursday as this telegram shows:

Mrs. E. W. Grogan, Boston, Undertaker says body of Mrs. Krause cannot be held longer than Thursday. If you will come to funeral you will have to be here Thursday at noon, as she will be buried Thursday evening without fail. This is final. I feel that Krause held body long enough for you to come. You better be in time to reach here Thursday at noon. She will be buried then without fail. Answer if you will be here Thursday.

Tells of Carnegie's Joy at 'Unloading'

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—"Pierpont, I am the happiest man in the world. I have unloaded the burden upon your backs, now I am off to Europe to play." said Andrew Carnegie to J. P. Morgan when the deal was closed by which the Pittsburgh steel magnate disposed of his holdings in the United States Steel Corporation, according to David A. Reed of Pittsburgh in his argument before the Federal Circuit Court in opposition to the suit of the government for the dissolution of the Steel Corporation for alleged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

'HUB COLD,' SAID BOSTON NOTE AT DE LUXE TRIAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A strong literary atmosphere was thrown yesterday about the trial in the Federal court of James J. Farmer, Colonel William F. Hartley, Samuel F. Warfield and others in the alleged $10,000,000 de luxe edition book swindle by the introduction of a series of letters said to have passed between the men on trial. In one letter, written impromptu from Boston, Colonel Hartley apparently breaks into poetry, as was a communication to Farmer, and reads:

December 19, 1913.

Friend Jim—I'll bet $10,000,000
Accept that, Jim, and see if it is right—that Heinrich Jan Harris don't get the name of this customer, Walpole, Peck, etc., before the ink is dry. On my return my city will be
Rah, rah, rah, rah!
How much money shall I draw?
Tremendous—2 or 3—for Jim,
And old Bill Hartley, the same for him.

For such is a decent fellow,
Without a streak of yellow
A pal who sticks through thick and thin,
Who's always out to try to win
Ignoring the absurd, trying to draw.
Till he lands a winner, then
Rah, rah, rah!

I found him sitting into a game of ten-cent limit, and the chief guest was our fat friend from Chicago, Mr. Squire. He was very glad to see me—I hope it was—and complimented me on being so fresh and healthy looking, and as he put it, "such a swell looking guy." I was dressed up to kill, had a new frock coat, silk overcoat, silk hat, new gloves and stick.

BILL.

FOUND BOSTON CHILLY.

Another letter, also from Boston, and from "Colonel Bill" to Farmer, dated November 1, 1909, read:

My Dear Mr. Farmer—Bidleux-no, Jim, there is no great love up here for any of our crowd from New York now that the Berlin cat is out of the bag and all the butchers up here have heard it—from Arthur, I guess. I am looked upon as a villain of the deepest dye and one to be afraid of—even the girls close their mouths tightly now for the warning has gone forth, "Beware of Hartley's in town. Tighten up and look for another big steal."

Faithfully yours in crime,
COLONEL BILL.

A letter written to Farmer by his son, dated Boston, September 29, 1910, read:

SAYS BILL TALKS TOO MUCH.

Yes, Bill has a bad habit of talking confidential business in front of his female friends, and on several occasions I have spoken to him about it, but he says he don't. Now this present lady love of Bill's thinks not. She sits around and listens to everything. Never says anything that Bill or I can hear.

Speaking of Bill, though, I think he would rather be known as a good confidence man than an honest publisher.

I am your son,
BILL.

Romeo W. Nathan, one of the defendants, who pleaded guilty early in the trial, testified yesterday that he sold some of the de luxe editions as late as 1910. He denied he ever conspired to defraud.

Mission workers have been holding services in St. Mary's Church, Quincy, "I had been preparing all week for the mission-planning," Doyle said. "I prayed devoutly, and seemed to feel that my prayers would be answered.

"After the Saturday service I asked Father Maldin for a special blessing. When he laid his hands on my head it seemed as if I were a new man. When I went out I was able to walk without crutches, something I had not done for seven years."

DR. FLOWER, NOW PENNILESS, PLEADS GUILTY

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Dr. Richard C. Flower, promoter of missing corporations, who was indicted on a charge of larceny and who evaded arrest for eleven years, pleaded guilty in the Supreme Court to two indictments charging him with grand larceny. He will be sentenced on October 29.

Broken in health and penniless, the man who is said to have made millions through mining swindles, entered the dock but came to fight conclusions any longer. When Justice Davis told him to consider his action carefully, he replied:

"I have considered. I have spent all the money I made in trying to get out of being obliged to do what I now do voluntarily."

Justice Davis, while accepting the plea of guilty, appointed counsel for him and advised him to consult with the lawyer before being arraigned for sentence.

After being revived he appeared again and explained he had fainted from nervousness.

BALDWIN AND WELSH MEET TONIGHT AT ATLAS CLUB IN CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

ADVANCE GUARD OF BIKE RIDERS ARRIVE FOR TITLE RACES AND SIX-DAY MEET

JAKE SCHAEFER SIGNS FOR BIG CONTEST HERE

"Young Jake" Schaefer, the famous billiard player, has been secured to show in Boston. He is a member of the Champion Billiard Players' League, and a great favorite with the followers of the cue, took the game when and on one of the days for delicacy of touch and faultless execution.

None of the billiard players of today can display the exquisite touch possessed by the elder Schaefer, and his genius in ferreting out technical points of the game forced change after change in every style of billiards for more than twenty years, during all of which time he was at the head of his chosen profession.

As an illustration of that, previous to the adoption of the balk-line style of play "the wizard," in a match with McCleary at San Francisco of 2,000 points, straight rail billiards, three nights play of 1,000 points each night, finished the match in what was really one long run.

Each night Schaefer ran out his 2,000 without a miss, and that marvelous performance astounded the billiard world of the straight rail game. Many different styles of game were advanced with a view of balking Schaefer, but all to no avail.

"Young Jake" is not the finished artist that his father was and that, of course, could not be expected, as he is not but a boy. Just having passed his twenty-first birthday, but he has already demonstrated some of the qualities that made his "dad" famous.

In the first world's championship tournament in which he competed with such entrants as Hoppe, Morningstar, Demarest, Sutton, Slosson and Tamada, he showed that he had the requisite skill and nerve to make every one of them play to their limit to get a win over him.

Schaefer's opponent during his stay in this city at the Imperial room will be Albert Cutler, which will give the many warm friends of the latter who had an opportunity of witnessing the work of the "chip of the old block."

Cub Heads Confer Over Trading Stars

CINCINNATI, Oct. 27.—President Charles Thomas and Secretary Charles P. Taft of the Cubs conferred here on the question of trading Outfielder Heinie Zimmerman to New York, and also took up the problem of Tommy Leach's future.

If Brooklyn hurdles to the Federals, Leach will be kept and may be made manager. If Brooklyn stays with the Cubs, Leach will be sold or traded. Zimmerman has lost his popularity in Chicago. He wants to go to New York and the Giants want him. The question of what price the Giants for Heinie is one that the club leaders discussed.

Freddie Yelle Wins Over Tommy O'Keefe

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—Young Charlie Weinert, the Newark, N. J., light-heavyweight, made his debut before a Philadelphia crowd at the Olympia A. C. defeating Jim O'Keefe, the Dublin giant.

In the semi-windup Willie Houck of this city earned a close victory over Packey Hommey of New York in six rounds. Freddie Yelle, Trenton, won outpointed Tommy O'Keefe of this city in six hard rounds. Freddie scored Tommy down the first for a count of five and later for nine, but failed to finish him.

Captain Reller, of Cornell Team, Quits

ITHACA, Oct. 27.—Oliver A. Reller, captain of the Cornell track team, has gone to his home in St. Louis and will not return to college.

A few weeks ago Reller was badly injured in a motorcycle accident and at first it was feared that he would die. He has recovered slowly, though the effects of the concussion are by no means gone.

Indians Rehearse All Fundamentals

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 27.—With the Syracuse game facing Carlisle, Coach Glenn Warner, who attributes the Redskins' defeat by Penn largely to carelessness, emphasized fundamental training on Indian Field today. Every afternoon the Big Red team is around the track and every phase of elementary football was covered.

Callahan Whips Driscoll.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Jimmy Callahan outpointed Young Driscoll in a return match of ten rounds at the Military A. C. in Williamsburg. Callahan's famous "pivot blow" was barred, but despite this disadvantage Callahan managed to pile up enough points for an undisputed victory.

WELSH MEETS BALDWIN IN TITLE BATTLE TONIGHT AT ATLAS CLUB

By RINGSIDE.

The dear old lightweight championship of the well-known universe will be tossed into the ring at the Atlas A. A. tonight when Freddy Welsh and Matty Baldwin exchange punches in a twelve-round battle. Welsh is the young man who has the noble lightweight crown on exhibition on his elevated brow while Baldwin might be termed the challenger extraordinary.

Mr. Hugh Fullerton, and the other statistic experts who bat for about .999 in the Prophet League will probably disagree with our statement that the tussle is for the lightweight championship. They will argue that the lightweight limit is 135 and that neither Welsh nor Baldwin is, bout is held in Oshkosh, Wis., or St. Albans, Eng.

The contest tonight is at catch-weights. Consequently the experts will admit that there are few things which they do not know, may claim the Welsh cannot lose his title even if he is beaten, for he will be different with the gentlemen of the first part.

BALDWIN REAL LIGHTWEIGHT.

Close students of the boxing game know that Baldwin is a real lightweight. He has made 132 pounds. He will probably scale close to 134 pounds this evening, or this is his best weight. Consequently if Matty grabs off the decision Welsh will have as much right to claim the lightweight title as Tom Sharkey would to assert that he is the most generous-hearted individual in the world.

A title is of little use to a boxer unless he is able to defeat all the men in his class. The public pays to see a champion because he is supposed to be the best man of his weight, but when he receives a couple of setbacks his "title" loses its value and could not be hocked for two bits.

It is our duty to state that Welsh rules a heavy favorite in the betting. We do not believe that much money will change hands over the result of tonight's tussle, as the champion is expected to win by points. There are few better boxers than the honorable Welshman and this has caused the betting element to fall under his banner.

A number of wagers were made today that Baldwin would get a draw. He is certain to force the issue every minute he is in the ring and his friend Welsh will be liable to receive some rude jolts.

The Charlestown boy realizes the importance of this evening's whirl and will enter the ring as fit as the proverbial riddle. He has been training for ten days at his farm in Lynnfield and is in grand condition. The little fellow is as hard as nails and is boxing extremely fast.

KNOWS WELSH'S STYLE.

Matty is versed in Welsh's style of boxing, as he met the champion in a twenty-round contest in San Francisco three years ago. Welsh was awarded the decision, but he knew that he was in a real fight when the final bell sounded.

The writer believes that Welsh will grab off the verdict tonight, but he will not have things all his own way. Baldwin is a rushing, tearing, two-handed fighter and besides is a fine ring general. He is sure to fight at a merry clip this evening and Welsh will have all he can attend to to hold the Charlestown favorite at bay.

Welsh asserted today that he is going to try and score a knockout blow. He says that he wants to prove that he can punch as well as box.

Welsh's intentions may be of the best, but in our humble opinion he has not even an outside chance to stop Baldwin. The latter has yet to be sent to the canvas for the count and we do not believe that Welsh has the ability to perform a task which some of the hardest hitting lightweights in the world have been unable to accomplish.

Baldwin may be beaten on points, but he will probably not be badly hurt when the whirl ends. He can take a punch on the jaw with the best of them and owns right here for more. This is one of the chief reasons why he is such a big favorite with the boys.

Billy Roche of New York will referee tonight's encounter. He was selected after a long controversy between the managers of the rival boxers. Roche first gained prominence while acting as the third man in the ring at Jim Corbett's club in California.

Welsh cannot afford to let Baldwin hang him even tonight as he is signed for two more important matches. He will clash with Ad Wolgast in Madison Square Garden, New York, on November 2, while he will battle Charley White in Milwaukee on November 9. If he is able to complete this campaign without receiving a reverse, he will have proved that he is a real champion.

WEIGHT FAVORS CHAMPION.

Baldwin, Wolgast and White are each star performers. They are classed among the leading men of their weight in the world and have few equals.

Welsh will probably have a few pounds of weight in his favor. Freddy is what is commonly known as a "big" lightweight. He usually fights at about 137 or 138 pounds, but can reduce to 135 pounds when it is necessary for him to do so.

The titleholder arrived in Boston early yesterday afternoon and secured quarters at the Copley Square Hotel. He was accompanied by Harry Pollock, his manager. Pollock claims that Welsh will prove too fast and clever for Baldwin. He also declared, when interviewed today, that Welsh will meet Packey McFarland if he serves to make the weight limit, Pollock said.

Packey has just come out of the West that Packey McFarland and Billy Nolan are seeking footlight honors and are trying to book a Vaudeville tour. From the present appearance of the pair it would seem that there is some truth to this report. The two certainly are heavy favorites in the "Publicity States."

"Nolan has put Packey on record as saying that he wants to meet Freddy Welsh for the world's lightweight championship," Nolan probably misquoted Parkey. The latter probably told Billy to challenge Jess Willard—the winner to meet Jack Johnson. McFarland, of course, may have met with an accident and have had one of his legs cut off.

"The present lightweight situation is very simple. Freddy Welsh is the champion of the world. As champion he is ready to defend his title against all comers who are lightweights. If Packey is a lightweight, he joks just the same as the rest of 'em.

Welsh and McFarland have met three times and in at least two of these battles it was the almost unanimous opinion of the spectators that Welsh was treated very harshly by not being given the decision."

M'DONALD MEETS ROBINSON.

It is natural for Pollock to boost Welsh, but there are thousands of fans who believe that McFarland is the Welshman's master. He beat him in Milwaukee, while the press reports state that the Chicago boy was robbed of a decision over Welsh in London, when their twenty round tussle was declared a draw. It is a question locally, however, whether McFarland can reduce to 135 pounds.

Jim McDonald of Nova Scotia and George Robinson of Cambridge will meet in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. It will be two six-round preliminaries. Howard McKae will clash with Tommy Quirk, while Dave Powers will battle Jack Donnelly.

Langford on Losing End in Clarke Go

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 27.—Sam Langford of Boston was beaten on points in ten rounds of fighting here last night with Jeff Clarke, Joplin's fighting ghost. Tommy Dixon was the referee.

A knockdown by Langford in the second round was his only advantage. Throughout the remainder of the mill Clarke raised straight lefts on Langford's face, while the tar baby was unable to connect except in the clinches, when he pounded Clarke's kidneys steadily but without apparent effect.

The first and second sessions belonged to Langford. In the second he landed a glancing right on Clarke's jaw.

The Joplin man was off his balance and slipped to the floor, but was up again and off like a whirlwind.

The third round was even. In the next seven Clarke was in and out, avoiding Langford's swings and jabs with spectrelike ability and planting a stiff left to Langford's face.

Three thousand fans saw the scrap, and after the mill they went wild. Clarke was lifted to the shoulders of admirers and paraded around the auditorium.

YOST'S SQUAD WILL ARRIVE HERE THURSDAY

The Wolverine pack headed by Hurry Up Yost, will arrive in Boston Thursday morning, and will go direct to the Woodland Park Hotel, Auburndale, where the Michigan warriors will be quartered prior to their clash with the Harvard team in the Stadium, Saturday.

Manager Tom Richards of the Crimson will invite the visiting players to try out their formations in the secrecy of the Stadium, Saturday, but in all probability Yost will content himself with running through a light signal drill on the hotel grounds.

Fifty men will form the band that Yost will carry with him to Cambridge. Among the players will be Tommy Hughitt, the great All Western quarter; Larry Splawn, picknamed the "Brickley of the West," and Clair, claimed to be the best half Michigan has ever had, excepting the great Clair of last season's team.

Saturday's game in the Stadium will start at 2 o'clock. Because of the sorry showing of the Michigan team at Syracuse, the attendance at Cambridge will probably fall below expectations. The seating capacity for the contest, including the temporary bleachers, will be 42,000.

Michigan Quarters Are Both Married

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 27.—T. H. Hushnell, Jr., the Michigan quarterback, who will probably direct the Wolverines against Harvard, Saturday, has sent his marriage a secret for more than a year.

Hushnell is a senior engineering student from East Cleveland, O., and his bride was Miss Adele Johnson of Colorado Springs. The ceremony was performed in Detroit, October 9, 1913.

Hughitt, the other Michigan quarterback, was married just before college closed in the Spring.

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—It was the general opinion around the Federal League offices that Roger Bresnahan, Cub catcher, would be signed by the Brooklyn Federal League team within a short time.

HARVARD'S BIG REGULARS RETURN TO SCRIMMAGE
LINE FOR MICHIGAN GAME

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

COACH YOST TO ARRIVE HERE EARLY WITH CHARGES FOR GAME WITH HARVARD

HARVARD REGULARS ARE BACK

By "AL"

The real drive for the finish is on at Harvard. The practice and try-out season is over. From now on the regulars, as far as is possible, will be used on the first varsity team in the trial scrimmages.

All the regulars who were physically able were put in the play yesterday and they will be sent right back today.

Tack Hardwick, Mahan and Logan were in their regular places for the first time in almost two weeks, and the three stars all gave evidence of having recovered their best form.

Mahan was the only one who showed any signs of recent injury and the slight limp that was his when the practice started soon wore off, once he got down to real business.

Acting Captain Trumbull, too, was in his old place on right tackle, and his addition to the line put a whole lot of pep into the forwards. Time out over the leader's eye has healed entirely and he is today just as good as new, you might say.

PENNOCK BACK ON FIELD.

A fight scrimmage against the second team was followed by a long signal drill in which all the tricks in the Crimson bag were worked out.

The fact that a couple of new-fangled plays gave Harvard the two scores against Penn state Saturday, even though they came hard to pull them off, seems to have raised the stock of the new game a whole lot out Cambridge way.

The team now that the star backfield is on the job looks more like the Harvard outfit of old, and after a few days more of hard practice should be ready to take care of Michigan Saturday.

Pennock, the all-American guard who has been suffering from a bad knee for about three weeks, has come in togs, and in the few warm-up gallops he did along the sidelines the veteran looked pretty fit to have very little wrong with him.

SOUCY OUT OF YALE GAME.

From the looks of things now, Harvard will be without the services of Soucy right up to the Yale game, and it is more or less doubtful indeed, made over from a center, will be able to play by that time. The guardsman got his wind started his left leg very badly early in the game Saturday.

The injury seemed trivial at first and the victim was out and about Sunday. Yesterday, however, he was unable to walk. An examination disclosed the fact that several ligaments had been very badly wrenched.

Soucy was rushed to the hospital and the doctors pronounced him out of the game. This, according to hospital officials, will put him on the shelf for three weeks. The coaches, however, are inclined to be optimistic and hope to have him back in two or three days or so.

Captain Charlie Brickley, released from the hospital, has vanished for three or four days. After he rests up and gets acquainted with things around again, he will return to the scene of his football triumphs in charge of the kicking squad of the Crimson.

BRICKLEY HOPES TO PLAY YALE.

Charles expects to get back into condition by the time of the Yale game, but even the wish hopeful of the Cambridge authorities admit that it is merely an idle dream.

Coach Haughton received something of a shock, when he learned yesterday that Dick Hart, the star end on the freshman eleven a year ago was not going to play football this Fall.

With Soucy out of the way, Hart had been looked on as a very likely candidate for one of the guard posts. He announced his intention of joining the ranks yesterday, but parental objection caused him to change his mind and keep away. Hart had the making of a star, and much was expected of him.

The other freshman ends, Sweetser and Dick Morgan, who were hurt early in the season, will hardly be available. Sweetser will be going about on crutches, while Morgan has not as yet been released from the infirmary.

The pair would come in handy just about now. Both are backs and both are just the type that Haughton likes.

A lot of practice this week will be devoted to the line men, trying to teach them to break through against the hostile kick formations Penn State used with such success from the field Saturday solely and simply because the Crimson forwards could not get low enough and keep at banking through and blocking.

COACH FRANCKE AS PUNTER.

The varsity squad drilled yesterday, which will be used today and for the remainder of the week, was:

C. Coolidge, lef; Sprowls, c; Withington, lg; Wallace, rg; Weiton, rg; Trumbull, rt; J. Coolidge, rg; Logan, qb; Hardwick, lhb; Mahan, rhb; Bradlee, fb.

Unless present plans miscarry this will be the team that will start the Michigan game Saturday. Soucy nock may come round and be put in his old position at guard, though it is extremely doubtful if another chance will be taken with the star until all danger of recurrence of his breakdown of last Wednesday has passed.

Fall Rowing Regatta Opens at Harvard

The big Fall rowing regatta at Harvard starts today and continues until Thursday. Eights representing the Freshmen dormitories, the Thayer and Eliot graded crews and the varsity eights will take part in the races, for which the Slocum and Pilley cups are offered.

The most interesting race of the week is slated for today, when the first and second university eights meet at the Henley distance. The shells have already rowed two dead heats.

CUB ZIMMERMAN TO BE TRADED TO THE GIANTS

CINCINNATI, Oct. 27.—Heine Zimmerman is to be traded, probably to the New York Giants, and the fate of Tommy Leach hanging upon the action of Roger Bresnahan, formed two topics discussed here when President Thomas met Owner Taft of the Cubs.

It might be said that these two questions brought the president to the conference, as the club owned by the conferees. What Bresnahan has cost his fortunes with the Federals, as has frequently been reported, and if he has whether Thomas and Taft have knowledge of the fact, was not disclosed as a result of the conference.

The certain thing is that Zimmerman will no longer be a Cub, and it seems just as certain that he will appear in New York uniform next year. These things stand out as facts, but need the official verification of Taft and Thomas.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Oct. 27.—In the best ten-round bout ever seen in Kalamazoo, Joe Mandot of New Orleans and Hal Stewart of Fort Wayne fought to a draw.

Mandot landed the more blows but Stewart appeared to have a harder wallop and thus earned matters.

Mandot led in the fourth, sixth and tenth rounds, Stewart had the better of the second, third and eighth. All the other four rounds were even.

Gary Has an Edge in Go with Wolgast

STREATOR, Ill., Oct. 27.—Tommy Gary of Chicago kept Ad Wolgast, exchampion lightweight, very busy for ten rounds here and while no decision was given, Gary, who began fighting from the tap of the gong in the first round, had considerably the better of it as a whole.

STALLINGS IS A SUCCESS IN STAGE DEBUT

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—George Stallings, manager of the world's championship Braves, is just as successful on the stage as he is on the ball field. The leader of the Boston team is today being hailed as an actor extraordinary as a result of his stage debut here last night.

Stallings on the stage is quite a different man from the Stallings of the baseball bench. In a ball game he is a stern, driving force which compels young athletes to play ball for all they are worth. As an actor Stallings is a mild-mannered, courtly gentleman, who has nothing except praise for his "kid" team, as he calls the champions.

Stallings got a great reception, and when he first appeared was loudly cheered for five minutes. He had plenty of friends in the boxes—real baseball fans, who were anxious to get a close view of "the miracle man" and give him a cordial hand. Mayor Curley of Boston was among those present, and Stallings was presented a loving cup.

He told a number of interesting tales about the Braves. For one thing, he said, he never allowed any of them to spring a joke during a ball game. He made them all take it very seriously.

Part of the club's work during the season was a daily conference in his room, where he laid down the law and talked over the plan of the coming games. Stallings said his "kids" were in the game heart and soul, and it was because they did their best all the time that they were able to accomplish what seemed impossible.

Stallings says that one of the greatest events in baseball happened during the last series of the Braves in Brooklyn, in the double-header when Red Smith's right leg was broken. Deep gloom pervaded the clubhouse between the games. He then took a couple of subs and told them to go in and win.

He impressed upon them the effect a victory would have on the downcast Braves. The subs won, and Stallings regards the victory as the greatest of the year. It had the required effect and the team was itself again the next day.

Among those present were President James E. Gaffney, owner of the Giants; Secretary John A. Heydler of the National League; D. Leroy Reeves, secretary to John K. Tener, president of the National League, and President Edward G. Barrow of the International League.

FIGHT TO BREAK TIE IN GREATER BOSTON LEAGUE

UNLESS Casino and Winthrop, the two second division teams, upset the "dope" tonight, the tie in the Greater Boston bowling league is likely to remain unbroken. To these two quintets has been assigned the task of mowing down the leaders, Harvard and Bowdoin Square, and, while bowling is an uncertain game, it does not seem possible that either of them will be successful in their venture.

With a little aid from both, a third team, Loop, may jump into the leadership, as it is only one point from first place. Loop will be handicapped, however, tackling Eglestion Square, a team of about equal strength. This match is looked upon as the big event of the night and will undoubtedly draw well in the Forest Hills section.

Rowe's Wharf will send a strong team against Terminal in an effort to move up a peg or two.

* * *

HARRY COLE, holder of the world's three-string candlepin record of 418, and anchor for the Winthrop team of the Suburban League, will roll against the peerless Paul Poehler when his team meets the Ball Square quint at Somerville at the Winthrop Beach alleys next Friday night. The two stars have not met in a regular team match for several years, and considerable interest is attached to this event.

* * *

BURT AYER, manager of the Winthrop team, has added much strength to his quintet, having secured the services of two of Lynn's best bowlers, "Cozy" Dolan and "Buck" Dervin.

* * *

THE newly organized Social and Athletic Inter Club league, composed of six of the strongest social organizations in Greater Boston, namely, The Jamaica Central Club, Prospect Club, Comers Club, Jamaica A. A., Weston A. A. and Mt. Hope A. A., will start its season of eight-game weeks at the Eglestion Square alleys on next Tuesday evening. William Rodden, of the Jamaica Central Club, has been chosen president of the organization, while James McMann, of the Jamaica Club, will look after the duties of secretary-treasurer.

* * *

A BATTLE for second position is on tonight when the Furniture bowlers meet the Arch street alleyers. Osgood and Morse will be the competitors for the runner-up position and both are sure to fight hard to cling close to Atkinson, which meets a formidable five-man opponent in Walker-Pratt.

* * *

OSGOOD has two points the better of Morse, and is particularly anxious to hold the lead as it goes against Atkinson next week.

* * *

THE Boston City Club will roll its first match in the Amateur Boston Pin League tonight at the Colonial alleys.

* * *

PRESIDENT HOLLAND of the Boston Bottleoil League expects to see the vacancies filled this evening. When the big three-game session gathers at the New Boston alleys, Any bottlepin bowler who is anxious to join the good five-game should apply to Mr. Holland at the alleys.

* * *

FIVE teams have tried to win a point from John C. Paige & Co. of the Fire Insurance league but without success. The quintet representing the Firemen's Fund will attempt to stop the leaders tonight.

KARL POEHLER brother of the illustrious Paul assumes charge of one floor at the Dewey Square alleys today.

ADVANCE GUARD OF BIKERS HERE FOR BIG RACES

The work of building the track for the sprint and motor-paced championships at the Boston Arena next Saturday night and the six-day race which begins next Monday will be started immediately after the Welsh-Baldwin bout tonight and it is expected that the work will be completed in time to give the men a day or two in which to work out over the new board surface.

The advance guard of riders who are to compete in the races have already arrived and with favorable weather conditions they will keep in trim by daily workouts on the Revere saucer.

Those who are here are in tip-top shape, as they have been training at the Newark Velodrome and Brighton Beach, and only the slightest kind of exercise will be attempted by them.

The six-day race will start shortly at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and continue until 2 o'clock the next morning. This arrangement will give the "fans" ten hours of racing a day, while arrangements have been made for special car service to and from the Arena.

The story of the famous "Hobo Team" of "Grassy" Ryan and Thomas will be pleasing to the "fan" fans," who have long followed this pair.

Recipe for Bald Heads

Well-Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has New Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and his ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a new growth of hair. Many of his friends did not know of it, and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following recipe and ordered a tribute the growth of my hair to the following simple recipe which any lady or gentleman can mix at home. Get a quarter-pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ½ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair, and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—ADVERTISEMENT.

Her Husband's Widow

SYNOPSIS

Leslie Morne, a governess, goes to wait by the sea and is spoken to by a man she does not know. She is rescued from his attentions by Victor Steele, a sergeant in the British Army, whom she later marries. She finds married life wearisome and refuses to follow Steele to Egypt. Then she hears of his death and conceals the fact that she is his widow. Four years later, married to Oswald Varney and mother of a boy, she visits the Temple of Solomon in Jerusalem with her husband.

By EDMUND B. D'AUVERGNE

(Dramatic translation, and all other rights as to copyright, 1914, by A. C. Hall, Daily Mail. Serial rights in U. S. held by International News Service.)

IN Jerusalem you pass with startling abruptness from blinding sunlight into the tomblike gloom of arches and alleys.

They thrust their feet into the clumsy boot-like slippers, without which no one may tread the floor of a Mohammedan sanctuary.

They entered the sacred edifice. It is like no other in the world.

Leslie turned aside and leaned in dreamy mood against the balustrade round the rock of sacrifice.

She raised her eyes, and, opposite, saw her husband talking with a tall, spare man in the khaki uniform and red fez of an Egyptian official. She drew in her breath. The man had his back toward her, but she knew that the premonition of disaster which had obsessed her was about to be fulfilled. He turned. Their eyes met, and she gripped tightly at the balustrade. The man was Victor Steele.

CHAPTER IX.

EXCEPT that his lips parted and were then shut tight as if to restrain an exclamation, he gave no sign of recognition. He looked down at the surface of the rock as if listening to Varney's whispered though animated talk.

For an appreciable space of time Leslie remained leaning against the balustrade. As in the supreme agony of fear all the blood seemed to have gone to her heart, her muscles refused to obey her will, her knees shook. She expected to fall to the ground. With a desperate effort she turned away and, stumbling over the rich carpets, staggered out onto the porch.

She stood clinging to a pillar. Victor alive! How had he come to life again? They had been positive of his death. She recalled the assurances given her at the War Office ever four years ago as distinctly as though it had been yesterday.

His comrades had seen him speared. She had never heard of him or from him since. But she knew there was no possibility of a mistake, or an illusion. It was Victor Steele, dead, who stood within the sacred dome behind her conversing with her husband.

Her husband—but which of them was her husband? Oswald, of course. The marriage with the other man was invalid. Rose Darley had told her so. There could be no doubt about that. She thought of her son, and drew a deep breath.

She was Oswald's wife, but what had she been to Sergeant Steele? The blood rushed to her face. She had borne his name, she had lived with him three months. Oh, it was wicked. Hideous that fate should have played her this trick! She cringed with shame. She put her hand to her brow and tried to understand what had happened.

And what were the two men talking about—how had they come to know each other? Victor had denounced her and denounced her to Oswald. How did men behave toward women in such circumstances?

She walked unsteadily down the steps, and then not feeling quite sure of herself, rested against the balustrade at which the faithful perform their ablutions before going to the shrine.

She turned toward the porch through which she had come, and saw Oswald come out accompanied by Victor Steele. They descended the steps toward her. She braced herself for the ordeal. Turning half round she affected to be enjoying the prospect of the Mount of Olives.

The two men halted beside her. She did not raise her eyes.

"You look rather pasty, Leslie," began her husband cheerfully. "Rather stuffy inside there, eh? I want to introduce an old friend of mine—Captain Steele, Egyptian Army. Queer we should knock up against each other after all these years in this place of all others. This is my wife, Steele."

Leslie turned slightly toward them. For the briefest instant she raised her eyes toward Victor's in desperate entreaty. She flowered her lids again and murmured, "How do you do, Captain Steele? It must have been a great surprise for you to meet each other."

"An unlikely spot, certainly, Mrs. Varney."

SHE HEARS THE VOICE OF HER "DEAD" HUSBAND

The last time she had heard his voice was at the London station, when he bade her farewell that dismal December afternoon. It was slightly deeper in tone now, but she failed to hear it, and the thrill was not unpleasant. She fancied that he had laid a stress on the words "Mrs. Varney." Yet it was impossible to suppose that he did not recognize her.

"I knew Steele years ago," explained Oswald, "when I was in the army. We saw service together near Aden. You remember that awful hole, Steele? Well, I always said it that you saved my life."

Funny I never spoke about him to you, Leslie. Well, you see, it's not because I had forgotten. And so you're in the Khedive's service now, and got your cross, lucky beggar! Here, I must introduce you to our friends."

His face was deeply bronzed—in fact, many of the Arabs looked by were fairer than he. The close-cropped hair about his temples was here and there flecked with gray, and there were lines on his face which told of pain and hardship; but his masculine English beauty seemed somehow to have been refined and ennobled, perhaps by the same agencies.

The fez, pushed slightly on one side as he raised his hand in a salute to the Durgans, showed a low scar across his forehead. His eyes twinkled, and perhaps explained the red ribbon of the Victoria Cross he wore in pocket of his tunic. His uniform was destitute of any ornament except this and the plain gilt buttons and stars on his shoulders denoting his rank and regiment.

"Can you talk Arabic, Captain Steele?" began Miss Preddin in her high, nasal voice, lifting her impertinent face to his. "Yes? How perfectly lovely! Now we shan't be tied to your apron strings, Mr. Ions, sir," she said, turning to the clergyman.

"Look here, Steele," said Oswald in his heartiest manner, "you and I must have a long yarn together. Lord, it will do me good to hear about the Red Sea and the good old Fuzzie-Wuzzies. I've got slack—slack. Leslie says I'm getting fat. Now look here, old fellow, you have got to come home to lunch with us, even if you have a prior engagement with the Pasha."

"That's exactly what I have got," replied Victor, adding very firmly, "For which reason, unfortunately, I can't accept your invitation."

Oswald protested warmly. "Make the Turk wait. They always keep us waiting. If you won't lunch you must dine with us. Where are you staying?"

"At Hewin's Hotel outside the Jaffa gate. I should like to dine with you immensely, but I daren't fix a time, for I am liable to be called away at a moment's notice." Leslie, who had kept her eyes steadily averted, felt that he looked toward her as he said this. "Why not drop in at my place on the off-chance?" he suggested to Varney, "and we could turn away at our hearts' content without boring the ladies, or I'm sure you should do. I haven't been in Europe for four years. I've nothing to talk about except gypsies and dervishes."

"I'm sure that wouldn't interest Mrs. Varney or Miss Durgan." He extended his hand towards his friend and to cut short the interview. Don't come round," agreed Varney, "but, you know, I'm always up to the same. I want to hear how you have settled on. Well, good-bye, if you must go."

LESLIE WATCHES THE CAPTAIN DEPART.

They shook hands cordially. Victor saluted the ladies. "Do come," pleaded Freddie Durgan as he turned away.

They obediently followed the dragoman across the court. Leslie, lingering behind, glanced over her shoulder at the retreating form of Steele. At the same moment he looked back at her. They both turned their heads away.

An Age-Old Decree

By NELL BRINKLEY

But Clipping Eros Never Held Him Yet

LITTLE maid—and woman-grown—the unwise and the one versed in the labyrinth of Love's winding ways—has since Cleopatra turned compelling eyes on Antony and tried to keep him always by her side in unambitious dreaming land before and since—since little brown girls on the river that flows through the crumbled Garden of Eden laid wistful hands on Love's departing shoulder and drew him back—'til now, when feminine kind wears ruffles and little black hats with grotesque tassules in them, fawn-tops on their shoes and their hair sleeked up as though they were scared from ALL times until now, woman clips the wings of Eros—thinking this will hold him fast—CONTENT!

But, it doesn't—not ever—work! Love with clipped wings develops the mad yearning to sneak! If he can't fly the fence, he'll crawl under, even if he never dreamed of leaving before. For Love will go his way, mind you—whatever you do. His dreams come from nowhere, made of the fragile gold of his mind! In ardor he clings close to your heart, content to let the world go spinning past. If he saunters out to clear his brain of dreams and mix in common things for a little while, if his heart is yours, he will sail back to dream again and eat your salt.

But if the gold of his dreams tarnish, and his gaze and feet wander, and he soars out of your garden on freedom bent—all you may do is, remember that his own mother said he was a villain (though very sweet), and forget him softly. If he be ardent and faithful, eager for his nook in your heart, give him the world for his playground, hold him aloft to the winds of the earth, and bid him gayly go where he will—THIS love will long your knees. If he be of a roving eye and wandering fancy, give him the same wide world. Perhaps he will linger wondering about the state of your heart, fearful for his place at your feast-table, anxious for his own tiny rose-yard since you open the gate to him!

But don't clip his wings! For the best Danny that ever was, who never dreamed any more than to look through the knothole of his fence, will grow a mad desire to get away. He'l burrow out if he can't shin the wall! — NELL BRINKLEY.

THE LAST SHOT

By Frederick Palmer

A Story of War and Love, Told by a World-Famed War Correspondent. The Author Is Now at the Front

Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons. Copyright, 1914, by McClure News Paper Syndicate.

"CONSIDERING the part that we have played at The Hague," observed the foreign minister later, "it will be rather inconvenient for us not to—"

"There is only one thing to me, Lanstron," said the premier, "and that is that we have to jump in at the head of the procession and receive the mud or the wedding cake as it happens."

With Partow's and the staff's appeals went an equally earnest one from the premier and his cabinet. Naturally, the noisy element of the cities were the first to find words. It shouted in rising anger that Lanstron had betrayed the nation. Army officers who had been retired for their leisurely habits said that he and Lanstron had stripped the army of its best. But the average man and woman in a daze from the shock of the appeals after a night's celebration, were waiting and wondering and asking their neighbours' opinions. If not in Partow's then in the staff's message they found the mirror that set their own ethical problems at rest, for them.

Before they had made up their minds the correspondents at the front had set the wires singing to the evening editions; for Lanstron had directed that he be given the news of the army's lines at daybreak. They told of soldiers awakening from the debauch of yesterday's fighting, normal and rested, glowing with the security of possession of the frontier and responding to their leaders' sentiment; of officers of the type favored by Partow who would bring the industry that commands respect to any calling, taking Lanstron's views as worthy of their profession; of that irrepressible old lancrats of the soldiers, Captain Stransky, I. C. (iron cross), breaking forth in a new song to an old tune, expressing his brotherhood ideas in a "We-have-ours-let-them-keep-theirs" chorus that was spreading from regiment to regiment.

"WHY NOT?"

Only the retired officers to grumble in their corners that war was no longer a gentleman's vocation and silenced the protests of their natural allies in the business of making war, the noisy element, which promptly adapted itself to a new fashion in the relation of nations. Again the great square was packed and again a waving-like roar of cheers "to" and the white speck of an eminent statesman's head. All the ideas that had been fomenting in the minds of a people for a generation became a living force of action to break through the precedents born of provincial passion with a new precedent, for the power of public opinion can be as swift in its revolutions as decisive in its victories," Mme. Tra said at large, after rubbing its forehead and readjusting its eye-glasses and clearing its throat, exclaimed:

"Why not? Isn't that what we have all been thinking and desiring? Only nobody knew how or where to begin."

The premier of the Browns found himself talking over the long day's work and premier of the Grays in an intimate fashion as if they were visiting relatives and were on terms of confidential intimacy.

"You have been so fine in waiting an indemnity," said the premier of the Grays, "that Tarnow suggests we give him Silesia as it happens."

With Partow's and the staff's appeals went an equally earnest one from the premier and his cabinet. Naturally, the noisy element of the cities were the first to find words. It shouted in rising anger that Lanstron had betrayed the nation. Army officers who had been retired for their leisurely habits said that he and Lanstron had stripped the army of its best. But the average man and woman in a daze from the shock of the appeals after a night's celebration, were waiting and wondering and asking their neighbours' opinions. If not in Partow's then in the staff's message they found the mirror that set their own ethical problems at rest, for them.

Before they had made up their minds the correspondents at the front had set the wires singing to the evening editions; for Lanstron had directed that he be given the news of the army's lines at daybreak. They told of soldiers awakening from the debauch of yesterday's fighting, normal and rested, glowing with the security of possession of the frontier and responding to their leaders' sentiment; of officers of the type favored by Partow who would bring the industry that commands respect to any calling, taking Lanstron's views as worthy of their profession; of that irrepressible old lancrats of the soldiers, Captain Stransky, I. C. (iron cross), breaking forth in a new song to an old tune, expressing his brotherhood ideas in a "We-have-ours-let-them-keep-theirs" chorus that was spreading from regiment to regiment.

"WHY NOT?"

Only the retired officers to grumble in their corners that war was no longer a gentleman's vocation and silenced the protests of their natural allies in the business of making war, the noisy element, which promptly adapted itself to a new fashion in the relation of nations. Again the great square was packed and again a waving-like roar of cheers "to" and the white speck of an eminent statesman's head. All the ideas that had been fomenting in the minds of a people for a generation became a living force of action to break through the precedents born of provincial passion with a new precedent, for the power of public opinion can be as swift in its revolutions as decisive in its victories," Mme. Tra said at large, after rubbing its forehead and readjusting its eye-glasses and clearing its throat, exclaimed:

"Why not? Isn't that what we have all been thinking and desiring? Only nobody knew how or where to begin."

The premier of the Browns found himself talking over the long day's work and premier of the Grays in an intimate fashion as if they were visiting relatives and were on terms of confidential intimacy.

"You have been so fine in waiting an indemnity," said the premier of the Grays, "that Tarnow suggests we give him Silesia as it happens."

"I think so, for the same reason," responded the premier of the Browns, "they say it is good business. It means prosperity and progress for both countries."

"After all, a soldier comes out the hero of the great peace movement," concluded the premier of the Grays. "A soldier uses the tricks with our own cards—but Partow was the greatest statesman of us all."

"No doubt of that!" agreed the premier of the Browns. "It's a sentiment to which every premier of ours who ever tried to crown him would have readily subscribed."

The every-day statesman smiles when he sees the people smile and grows angry when they grow angry. Now and then appears an inscrutable one who finds out what is a breeze in their sails and brings it to a head. He is the epoch maker. Such a one was that little Corsican who gave a stagnant pool the storm it needed, until he became overfed and stretch his ambition for a continuation of his youthful prudence.

Marta had yet to hear the shock of yesterday's death. After learning the manner of it she went to her room, where she remained, stupefied, sleepless all night. The morning found her still tortured by her visualization of the picture of him, invincible as he now pressed around the Gray headquarters.

HAPPINESS

"It is as if I had murdered him!" she cried. "I, who would make love to me—I let my hand remain in his once—but then it was all. Lanny, I—I couldn't have known of any love. Yet that was enough—enough!"

"Enough, indeed, Marta," Lanstron pleaded, "that the premier of the Grays held yesterday to be a compact that he should not return alive if he lost. He could not have won, even though you had not helped us against him. He would only have lost more lives and brought still greater indignation on his head. His fate was inevitable—and he was a soldier."

But his reasoning only racked her with a shudder.

"If he had only died fighting!" Marta replied. "He died like a rat in a trap and I—I set the trap!"

"No, destiny set it," put in Mrs. Galland.

Lanstron dropped down beside Marta's chair.

"Yes, destiny set it," he said, imploringly.

"Just as it set your part for you! And—Marta," Mrs. Galland went on gently, with what Marta had once called the wisdom of mothers, "Lanny lives and lives for you. Your destiny is life and to make the most of life, as you always have. Isn't it, Marta?"

"Yes," she breathed after a pause, in conviction, as she pressed her mother's hand. "Yes, you have a gift of making things simple and clear."

Then she looked up to Lanstron and the flame in her eyes, the leaping, spontaneous passion he already knew, held something of the eternal as her arms crept around his neck.

"You are life, Lanny! You are the destiny of today and tomorrow!"

Do You Know That—

A candle sixteen feet high and weighing 400 pounds, the finest and largest that was ever produced, has been made in New York, and is ultimately to stand in the Vatican at Rome, where it will be lighted once a year on All Souls' Day, in memory of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. At this rate it will have an endurance of quite 1,285 years—assuming it is left to burn twelve hours on each day when it is lighted.

In Servia brides are kidnaped. When the lover has made up his mind that the girl is ready to marry him, he spreads his forces—consisting of his best friends, armed with rifles, go up to the girl's house, seize and carry her off to church, and get married. Otherwise the courtship is considered a failure, conducted by the men of the family.

It has been calculated by a government botanist that one seed of cotton, given the application of all possible care and skill, would produce 40,000,000,000,000 seeds in six years, and he gives as an actual case of the production of 11,000 bushels of seed of a pure strain of wheat from a single grain in five years, without the exercise of any special care.

It isn't how much you do, it's the way you do it, that wears you out. You can scrub and scour and polish all day long, and then not get through—if you do it the hard way.

And you can rub and boil your clothes and wear yourself out and them, too, if you want to.

But you don't have to. You can use Fels-Naptha Soap for your washing and all your housework, and get done in half the time, with half the labor. Your work will be better done and you'll feel better than ever before.

Forces of Prosperity Rapidly Mobilizing

SOUTH FORGING AHEAD FAST, SAYS FAHEY

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 27—John H. Fahey of Boston, president of the National Chamber of Commerce, whose members have been here on their tour of the South in a talk with a representative of the AMERICAN, said of conditions in the South:

"The chamber now has a membership of some 625 organizations in every section of the Union, and represents more than 500,000 business men.

"We are especially glad to come to the South just at this time in view of the extraordinary conditions affecting cotton and other products.

"We have so far traversed seven Southern states and visited eight Southern cities. Nowhere have we found any evidence of that unreasoning pessimism which it has been supposed would prevail down here. Of course, with a record-breaking cotton crop for which many farmers were expecting twelve cents and a greater influx of riches than almost ever before, it has been decidedly disconcerting to have a great European war knock the prospect in the head over night.

SOUTHERN SPIRIT SPLENDID.

"Nevertheless the Southern business men generally have been taking hold with a spirit that is splendid.

"They are certainly not failing to see ahead, but are going on with their preparations for the handling of a growing trade to South and Central America and the Far East.

"Wharves and terminals are being built at almost every port; agricultural products and extensions are going straight ahead, and the energetic leadership found everywhere is bound to count.

"More cotton has been picked in South Carolina than in any previous year up to this season, notwithstanding the many reports that cotton would not be picked.

"Bankers and merchants of Charleston report that in the city Fall trade has never been better.

"Three new port terminals, involving an expenditure of $1,500,000, are under way.

SAVANNAH FEELS WAR.

Savannah, as a great cotton exporting port, is, of course, feeling the effects of the war comparatively, but even there we do not find more than thirty ships at Savannah piers at this period of the year. At present there is only one ship at the dock, little cotton is moving, and hardly anything in the way of naval stores.

"Nevertheless contracts are being made for export and Savannah is trying to get hold of ships.

"A new million dollar railroad terminal is under construction, and other projects are in hand.

"The city of Jacksonville is building two new docks, 1,000 feet each in length, at an expense of $1,500,000. The Standard Oil Company is also building a large new dock, and a pulp mill is under way involving a million dollars more.

"Mobile has received a great push forward in recent years. The city is very much interested in the markets opened by the canal.

"A year ago four steamers were operating out of Mobile to the West Indies. Today there are nine. A number of Norwegian and British ships are loading for naval stores for Cuba and South America when we were in Mobile.

NEW ORLEANS VERY BUSY.

"New Orleans is very much on the move again. A large fleet of vessels for Europe laden with wheat, cotton and other commodities, left port last week, when the record of the exports for a single week was the greatest in the history of the city.

"The largest cotton warehouse ever built being now under construction on the water front which is entirely controlled by the city.

"When the war broke New Orleans had 7,000,000 bushels of wheat contracted for. Most of these contracts were canceled by the European purchasers at prices around 78 cents a bushel, but in less than four weeks they were buying it back again at a dollar to dollar six and one-half. A million bushels of wheat were moved during September and now more is going forward as well as corn, oats and other supplies.

"There is not a large amount of cotton on the wharves and the indications now being carried on indicate that there is still be moving before long.

"The cotton mills located in New Orleans, Biloxi, Natchez and Meridian of cloth are running night and day, and all in their history have had more to do."

BUSINESS SENTIMENT IMPROVES

The week began with sentiment improved in both business and financial circles. The New York bank reserve showing was not a surprise, as money has been flowing to that centre from the interior, a train carrying the wiping out of the reserve deficit. But it is expected that banks would report they had around $8,500,000 more than legal requirements. The attitude of the British government in regard to cotton shipments from this country and to others at war promoted confidence.

Sterling exchange has a downward tendency, but there is every prospect that foreign buying of American products will keep the balance owed by this country to Europe. While progress may be slow, a steady improvement is looked for. Orders for 17 railroads could charge 5 per cent more for carrying freight than they would be in a position to supply on a large scale, something which would have a beneficial effect upon many industries, especially steel.

SOME RAILROAD BUYING.

While railroads are forced to economize as rules before they are placing some equipment orders. The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis road has bought 1,000 cars, the Reading has ordered 1,000 tons of steel, and orders will take in all about 7,500 tons. It is believed that if the European war lasts long that steel expectations will be realized and improvement in this industry will have a salutary effect upon many others.

EXPORTS ENCOURAGING.

One of the most encouraging signs of the hour is the growth of foreign demand for American products. Exports from New York last week were not only the largest for any corresponding period since the war began, but made the largest showing for any week in many years. Exports from that port alone exceeded $40,000,000 for more than $2,000,000, showing how far the loss of international trade is turning in our favor. Export trade last week was more than $6,000,000 in excess of the total for the week previous.

WHEAT INFLUENCE.

Heavy buying of wheat for European shipments indicates that belligerent countries are not so well stocked with food supplies as has been claimed. Or perhaps they expect to be cut off from supplies by interference with harvesting next year and are laying foreshadowed in obtaining supplies. Whatever the reason is, exports and Canada last week is estimated to have totalled between 10,000,000 and 12,000,000 bushels. There is also been big buying of oats on foreign account.

LONDON IS CHEERFUL.

Although England is engaged in a struggle which is regarded as involving the fate of Europe for years to come, essential and affords an example of courage not to be ignored in a country so rich and prosperous as the United States, and which is enjoying the full benefit of peace at home. Another step has been taken to-ward ending the moratorium, there having been successful handling of bills which have matured and could not be renewed.

READJUSTMENT OF CREDIT.

It is reported from London that if the government will sanction the plan, bankers and stock exchange authorities will agree to continue present loans on prescribt security for a year later the new ends at 5 per cent. It is proposed that the present open speculative position be paid off by very small instalments, beginning with 2½ per cent, and covering a period which will give speculators ample time to get on their feet.

MILDRED SULLIVAN'S LIFE STORY

CHAPTER XII.

After three of the four suspects had been bound over for the Grand Jury, Deputy Sheriff Graves of Fort Fairfield, on the New Brunswick boundary, received that he saw a runabout similar to that owned by Dr. Dudley, going at high speed across the bridge leading from Four Mile highway, at 2 o'clock on the morning following the night Mildred Sullivan disappeared from the Pelletier home in Presque Isle.

County Attorney Archibald assisted to an AMERICAN reporter that the young Aroostook lad have among its witnesses a prominent man of Presque Isle, who would testify that Dr. Dudley had come to him and borrowed money. The man is alleged to have given Dr. Dudley a check for $25.

At Dr. Dudley's office it was learned that Dr. Dudley was away with his car all that Friday night. Dr. Dudley and his friends are expected to explain this with an alibi that he attended a house party in a neighboring town.

When viewed by the AMERICAN reporter and a reporter from another Boston newspaper, the Dudley runabout was covered with mud and dust. The tires were gashed. One of the steel rods supporting the right hind mudguard was snapped and the guard bent. The glass in the forward lamps was missing, indicating that the car had been driven without lights. But the garage proprietor said the car had been run from the Dudley farm to the shop by the doctor's brother under-study, young Dudley.

Reporter Finds Hair on Auto.

In looking for marks in the back of the machine the reporters found hair from a woman's head. There were strands of brown hair on the shelf in the rear of the machine. There had been an extra seat behind, which Dr. Dudley had removed some time before, leaving a boggage space with a low edge.

The hair was found under the seat on the right side. While the reporters were inspecting one strand of hair the wife of the reporter found another. "Here is some more," picking at a rent in a board, where a cluster of hair had caught. Then a number of hairs in this cluster, all varied and caught in what appeared to be an old nail hole. The hair was later shown to Mildred Sullivan's father and to Mrs. Mrs. Melville. Both thought it resembled Mildred's hair.

The reporters turned over the envelope containing the hair to County Attorney Archibald at Presque Isle. The hair is now one of the exhibits in the case. It was not under the seat in a position where it could not have blown, and it was not like ordinary "fuzz" gathered in a car. The reporters measured one hair with his ruler and found it to be 16 inches in length.

On the way back from Washburn a farmer and his sons were learned that a man employed on Bert Hall's farm had been telling a startling story of the Mildred Sullivan case. His name is Tom Ryan. He admitted to the reporters having discussed the case, but Mrs. Bull in his presence contradicted Ryan's story.

"I'm going to tell the truth, Mr. Ryan here told my husband and me that he was with friends in Presque Isle after the girl disappeared and that he had told just such a story as Mrs. Bull narrated.

"Perhaps it was only gossip I heard," said Ryan to a reporter. "I was at the 'French Flat' in Presque Isle a week after the girl disappeared, and I heard people talking about the case."

Few Now Think Girl Is Alive.

At "French Flat" Ryan's story was discredited. Then village gossip had it that Everett Libby, a lodger at the Pellitiers', was being quoted as having said that while in the Pellitier House the night the Sullivan girl died and her body was carried away in an automobile, covered with a fur coat.

Libby was located at the starch factory where Pellitier and his son are employed, six miles from Presque Isle.

Libby admitted he had lodged with the Pellitiers, but explained he hadn't slept there the night Mildred Sullivan disappeared, nor for two nights before.

"Why didn't you sleep there those nights when you had always been accustomed to?" he was asked.

"Because I was working for the milling company and slept at the mill," he replied.

Rumors and theories are about as numerous as potatoes in that region now, if gossip is to be believed. Mildred Sullivan still [illegible]

Three Pictures to Think About

This Is a Time When Thinking Is Necessary, and Hard Thinking

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

This Picture Ought to Trouble Us

Here you see the one big power in the world free from war, and one that OUGHT to be free from anxiety, and be absolutely prosperous.

You can do your own thinking about this picture, without any help.

And after you have done it, you may feel like expressing some energetic views to the men who have opposed a big navy and a big commercial fleet for the United States.

Look at the crop on the land, and look at what represents United States shipping to carry it.

The workers, the farmers, the manufacturers and mechanics produce the wealth.

Government ought to have the brain to supply adequate transportation—in Government owned railroads and Government owned ships.

The great German business navy is a direct result of German Government intelligence. The same is true of the navy of England.

We ought to be able to do for our workers what those countries can do.

Don't you think so?

"Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?"—Or the Spirit of This Monkey Either?

Here is a good picture to use as a sermon against war vanity.

If you saw a monkey like this walking down the street, very proud of himself, and planning to be a hero, what would you say to him?

And what is the difference between the imaginary monkey, dressed up in this fashion, going off to murder somebody for glory, and the millions of men who rush to do the same?

Once the war has BEGUN, once a nation is invaded, then the fighting must be done, and the best are made to suffer for the stupidity of the criminals.

This monkey represents pretty well the love of uniforms in peace days. He is the kind of monkey well represented in the United States.

We ought to discourage him.

We have our troubles and make our mistakes. But we haven't got the monster depicted at the top of the last two columns eating

Youth's Place in Evolution

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE babies have had their turn this past Summer, and a very good turn it has been. It is to be hoped that thousands of them will now live who might have died but for the special attention that has been concentrated upon their needs.

The next turn ought to belong to the old people. They have had a good many things to discourage them lately. There is, for instance, the doctrine which has been ascribed to Dr. Osler (though incorrectly, it would appear, since he protests it isn't his), that a man is not of much use after forty or fifty, becoming an obstruction that ought to be got out of the way, somehow.

Whoever may be responsible for this opinion, it certainly has its advocates. We are loudly and brusquely told that this is the "age of young men." Old men are too slow for twentieth century ideas, and too conservative. They ought to step aside and make room for youthful blood and brawn. Just where they are to step to is a neglected detail that doesn't concern the impatient champions of the rights of the cadets. Some savage tribes who hold the same doctrine are more practical and thorough, as well as more prompt. They frankly put the old people to death. Modern civilization has more than winked at putting children to death, in many different, and often hypocritical, ways, but so far it has hesitated to lay violent hands on the aged. In that respect the latter still have an advantage.

In a few days, or at the most weeks, after emerging from its shell the young bird has learned all that its parents know. If we go lower down in the animal scale we find creatures that have no childhood or youth at all. In such cases there can be no progress. Animals that spring into existence virtually in the adult state have no room for development. The more the youthful stage is prolonged the greater the possibilities of advancement.

Should we gain anything by making human life intenser and shorter? That is perhaps a fair subject for argument. If we crowd out the old from active life, and continually lower the limit of age, can we invent a practicable method of giving a satisfactory existence to those whom society has commanded to stand aside? Can anybody see, at present, a social and industrial system under which everybody can accumulate enough at forty, or at the most fifty years, to be independent for the rest of his or her days?

We all get old, and we all want to get old, since nobody wishes to die young. That being the case, we are all interested in seeing that age gets its rights as well as youth,

Shorten Period of Youth

Yet it cannot be denied that at the present time men and women who are nearing the natural term of life and still have to earn their living, feel their anxieties increasing, because of the growing pressure from the eager, youthful throng that is striving to take their places. And one of the causes of this increase of pressure upon those who are advancing in life is the tendency of our educational system to shorten the period of youth by cutting down the preparatory stage and hastening on the assumption of the labors and responsibilities of manhood.

Now, it is a very interesting question whether, in these things, we are not going counter to the current of evolution that has carried man so far above the condition of his brute ancestors of ancient geological time.

In abbreviating the youthful period we are striking at the most distinctive feature of human, as contrasted with lower animal, development. In the vertebrate kingdom the higher the order of life the longer the period of childhood and youth. Charles Darwin thanked John Fiske for having explained clearly a most important element of human evolution which he (Darwin) had not sufficiently emphasized, viz., the effect of the prolonged adolescence that characterizes the development of the human being.

Monkeys and Infants

Precocity is not a mark of racial superiority, but rather the contrary. The smart little monkey is brighter than the human infant, probably exceeds it, for the time being, in practical intelligence, but it is old and wise too quick. It never gets above the level that its ancestors struck ages ago.

In a few days, or at the most weeks, after emerging from its shell the young bird has learned all that its parents know. If we go lower down in the animal scale we find creatures that have no childhood or youth at all. In such cases there can be no progress. Animals that spring into existence virtually in the adult state have no room for development. The more the youthful stage is prolonged the greater the possibilities of advancement.

How Helen Helped

Chapter VII.—IN A FALSE POSITION

"Oh, boy, don't you see what you are losing?"

THE day that Frank got back on the job after his "spree" a letter came from a large construction company in the West asking for bids on a large amount of material. This particular line of stuff came through Frank's department and he was the one that always attended to it. In dictating his reply he underestimated, by quite a large margin in his figuring, and if the order had been filled at the prices he quoted the firm would have lost a considerable amount.

The letter came to Helen to be copied and when she saw the figures, she realized that there must have been some mistake, for she knew what the goods cost. She went to ask Frank about it, but found he had gone out. It was then nearly closing time and she knew the letter must be sent at once. As she did not want any one else to know about Frank's mistake, she resolved to delay as long as she could the sending of it, with the hope that Frank would come back that evening. All the rest of the force had gone and Helen was sitting there alone when Frank came back to lock his desk. Helen showed him the low figures he had quoted and asked him if there had not been some mistake. After looking at the letter Frank said: "Helen, you have saved the firm a great deal of money and have also probably saved me my job. I don't know how I can ever thank you, but I'll try. I guess I have been drinking a bit too much lately and had better ease up."

As Frank stood by the side of his desk looking down at her he said softly, "Would you care much if I did stop it, Helen, forever?"

As he said this he took one of her hands in his, and as he did so she looked up at him, saying eagerly, "I DO care, oh, so much. I have been watching you day after day and knew what you were doing and it has been breaking my heart, for boy, boy, don't you see what you are losing—your whole future?"

Frank at last realized that Helen loved him as he had loved her, ever since they first met, and as he took her soft little hands in his two big ones they heard a chuckle from the door of another office and a voice say, "So that is the game, is it?" They looked around and there stood Paul Van Buren.

Three Pictures to Think About

There Is Some Comfort in This Picture

one hundred million dollars a day, and eating at the same time the lives and the flesh of tens of thousands of men—as war does in Europe.

We have all thought about this hideous war brute for years. We all KNOW now what he is like.

What we have seen of his work abroad ought to make war or talk of war impossible for us for many a year to come.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The original depositions and examinations of the persons accused in the famous witchcraft cases are preserved in asbestos boxes in the office of the Secretary of State on Beacon Hill?

Engaged Couples and Love Blindness

The Ethics of a Betrothal Ought to Include the Exercise of Good Common Sense

By DOROTHY DIX

THERE is no subject concerning which there is a wider difference of opinion than there is about the ethics of a betrothal. Among many foreign people a marriage engagement is almost as solemn and serious a matter as the wedding. In the East of our own country an engagement is a sort of quarantine that keeps every other man except her fiance away from a girl, while it doesn't bind him to the altar if he happens to change his mind. In the South, where they know how to play the love game, an engagement is merely a preliminary skirmish along the matrimonial line, and, short of the wedding day, either party can draw back with honor, and without breach of promise suits.

Nor do individuals agree as to what privileges and rights an engagement bestows upon the betrothed. There are men who think that an engagement gives them the full authority of matrimony, and that they have a perfect right to boss their fiancees, and do the jealous Turk act whenever any other man shows their particular lady love the slightest attention.

And there are girls who think that being engaged to a man gives them the privilege of policing their betrothed, and to raise Cain every time their own Romeo looks at another woman or gives evidence that he is aware that there is another skirt in the world.

A Galling Tyranny

This is pushing a good thing too far. This is tyranny of the most galling domestic brand. It is time enough for one to assume the attitude of a Keeper, and One-Who-Must-Be-Obeyed when one actually marries, and the engaged should reflect that, after all, until the wedding ceremony has been performed he or she has only an option on the party of the other part. The trade has not been closed, nor the goods delivered.

It is selfish and overbearing for a man before a marriage to narrow a girl down to his exclusive society and whatever attentions he chooses to bestow upon her. There's time enough for that when she is his wife and can make him take her about to places she wishes to go. Likewise it is both silly and catlish for a woman to keep a man tied to her apron strings during the days of her engagement. He will have plenty of that sort of thing afterward when he will have to produce an alibi for every evening he spends away from her.

As a matter of fact, there would be a great many more happy marriages if engaged couples looked upon their betrothal as merely a period of probation during which they undertook the serious task of finding out something about each other's character and disposition, and whether they were temperamentally suited and likely to make of matrimony a glad sweet song instead of a Kilkenny cat fight.

There are a great many worthy men and admirable women who with the best intentions in the world, and even with a sincere affection for each other, are so antagonistic by nature that if they marry they will make each other more miserable than any deliberate villain could. It should be the province of the engagement to reveal this state of affairs and to give the hapless couple a chance to withdraw on the safe side of the altar.

Too Much Googoo Talk

It is a thousand pities that engaged couples, instead of billing and cooing, and asking each other "oozes ducky is oo?" and will "oo ever get tired of me?" and does "oo love me a million, billion, trillion bushels?" don't use the precious opportunity to find out what each other thinks of the real problems of real life, and investigate each other's tastes on every subject from politics to pie.

There wouldn't be so many divorces if every engaged man would pin a girl down to brass tacks, before he married her and ascertain if she were prepared to do her own cooking, and make her own clothes and undertake the hardships of a poor man's wife. Nor would there be so many neglected wives if the engaged young man would find out whether his sweetheart had advanced views about women's rights and intelligence enough to understand when he talked to her about the books in which he was interested.

Nor would there be so many discontented wives if engaged girls would get the views of their future lords on the subject of a wife's rights, financial and otherwise, and find out whether the man she was purposing to marry intended to make an unpaid servant, a plaything, or a real companion of her.

Every engaged man and woman should be a Sherlock Holmes on the trail of the man or woman he or she is purposing to marry. Every characteristic should be studied, every word weighed, every act analyzed, and if the investigation convinced either party that the marriage would be a mistake there should be no difficulty in breaking the engagement and no discredit attached to doing so.

For this reason the breach of promise suit should be thrown out of court, and the man or woman who breaks an engagement, instead of being penalized, should be honored for having the courage to own up to having made a mistake, and taken steps to correct it before it was too late. At most, a broken engagement is a pin prick to affection and pride, but a divorce or miserable marriage is a stab at the very heart of society.
